GIRL IN TRUNK TRAGEDY LURED TO HER DEATH

NEW YORK, June 19.—Lured to her death on what she thought to be an errand of mercy, Miss Elsie C. Sigel, daughter of Paul Sigel and granddaughter of Franz Sigel, the famous German Civil War General, was led to her doom in the dingy tenement house at No. 782 Eighth avenue. She was strangled, and in attempting to solve the mystery of her death the police are confronted by an amazing love story—the story of the love of a pretty missionary for a Chinaman.

A worldwide search is already under way for Leon Ling, also known as William Leon and Leon Lee Lin, with whom the girl was said to have been in love.

When Leon's room was searched to-day a letter written by Miss Sigel, who was twenty years old, was found. It was one of the last of many written by Miss Sigel to the Chinaman found tied in a package. It was written from the home of her parents and read:

> You seem to be growing cold to me. Just think of the sacrifice I have made for you—my family, my friends! For God's sake, don't forsake me.

That Leon did not carry these letters away or destroy them convinces the police that he fled in great haste, leaving his rooms, furnished in luxurious Oriental style, without taking so much as a treasure with him. The body in the trunk was covered with quicklime.

Miss Sigel, who was twenty years old, had been dead a week. She had been strangled by a sash cord, which was tied tightly about her neck, and her body stuffed into a trunk.

More than 2,000 love letters found in Leon's room show him to be a genuine Don Juan. They come from many cities, including Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago.

Father Identifies Body.

The body was identified early to-day by Paul Sigel, the girl's father, of No. 200 Wadsworth avenue, who is a clerk in the Board of Health. He said his daughter had been missing since June 9. Letters found in Leon Ling's room, where the girl was strangled, furnished a motive for the murder. According to the police the letters written by Elsie Sigel to the Chinaman cover a period of two years. They are all couched in endearing terms. In one she speaks of the trouble her love for Ling had caused in her family.

The girl and her mother had been mission workers in Chinatown. Mrs. Sigel had spent fifteen years of her life in this work. Her daughter took up the work as soon as she left school about three years ago. The police theory is that she was lured to the Chinaman's room in the belief that she was bound on an errand of mercy, and that there she was strangled.

Ling a Chinese "Sport."

Ling, who, with his roomate, disappeared a week ago, about the time the police believe the girl was strangled, was a representative of a company which operates most of the chop suey restaurants in this city.

He is an Americanized Chinaman, is a "dresser," a "spender," a "sport," who attended Sunday School and at the same time plunged at fantan and the lotteries; who "took lessons in English" from Elsie Sigel and other young white girls and at the same time made love to them.

His American name is William Leon. His Chinese name is Leon Ling. The police to-day sent out messages to every city in the United States, Canada and Mexico, asking for his arrest. He is 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs about 125 pounds, has black hair and eyes and looks more like a Japanese than a Chinaman.

Playing the "Mission Game."

He has been "playing the mission game," as some other Americanized Chinese phrase it, for several years, here, and in Philadelphia.

Elsie Sigel met him in Chinatown through her work there and then fell a NATIONAL LEAGUE GROUNDS, St. Louis, June 19.—The Boston National League players arrived in St. Louis this morning from Terre Haute, and all members of the team were shocked to learn of the death of Colonel George Dovey, owner of the club. The news came as a big surprise to all the members of the team as it did to all his friends.

The game with the St. Louis Browns, however, was not postponed, and the teams started at the regular time. The flag was at half mast.

After to-morrow's game with the Browns, the Boston team leaves St. Louis for New York, where it plays a series and then returns to Boston.

LIGHT WORK FOR HARVARD CREWS

HARVARD QUARTERS, Red Top, Ct., June 19.—A heavy southwest wind continued to blow to-day, and the Harvard crews had little work. The varsity eight went down to the navy yard and back in short, easy stretches, with the new stroke in the boat, R. Cutler. They rowed very good, but no fast time was tried, they contenting themselves with a low stroke the entire distance. The water continued rough, so the work was limited.

The first varsity four also went out for a short paddle in front of the quarters. Sargent, who was stroke in the varsity eight, stroked the four this morning. He will make an ideal man for the four. The freshman crews did little work, paddling around the quarters on the west side. Coach Wray coached all the crews from the launch.

BIG POSTAL GAINS AT BOSTON OFFICE

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The Boston postoffice continues to show a remarkable growth in its receipts, the month of May showing an increase of $47,896.90 over the corresponding month of 1908. This large increase is equal to 11.37 per cent. The gross postal receipts of the Boston office for May, 1909, amounted to $468,804.97, and are among the largest in the country. Springfield and Worcester, Mass., also show a steady growth in postal receipts.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, June 19.—After a day of rest from big league baseball, but a day of strenuous minor league playing, the Boston Red Sox met the Philadelphia Athletics in the first game of a three-contest series.

Connie Mack's boys sailed into Boston early this morning from their own camp where they have been playing all the Western teams in the league, and from Boston they will continue around the circuit, landing in Philadelphia on September 6.

The veteran Athletic leader is aware of the fact that his team will have to cop the majority of the contests in Boston to keep the Red Sox from getting too near the top of the ladder, and primed his boys for a red-hot battle.

The work of the outfielders was made a little difficult by a high wind that carried fly balls in queer curves, but aside from this, the day was a perfect one for baseball.

The one day of rest sharpened the appetites of the bugs and they piled into the Back Bay field in good numbers.

The big flag in centre field was at half-mast out of respect for President Dovey of the Boston Nationals, who died suddenly to-day.

GIVES HARVARD MAN 60 DAYS; APPEALS

Henry B. H. Ripley, a Harvard student, charged in the Hingham Court with driving his auto at Nantasket while intoxicated, defended himself by declaring that he was not intoxicated. "I had had but two high balls," said Ripley, "and it takes eight to affect me at all."

Judge Kelley asked Ripley if one year at Harvard had not been enough to teach him that he could not take one glass of liquor without its having its effect.

Judge Kelley also took exceptions to the remark made by Attorney Francis Hurtubis, Jr., who appeared for Ripley, to the effect that "the best of us take a high ball occasionally without ill effect." Ripley was sentenced to sixty days in the House of Correction. He appealed and was held in $300.

CONFERENCE FIGHTS ON TELEGRAPH BILL

The special join Committee on Conference of the Legislature met this afternoon to see if an agreement could not be reached in the bitter clash over the telegraph filing time bill. The two bodies of the legislature must come to terms to-day as the Great and General Court adjourns for the session to-night.

The committee consists of six members. They are Senators Potter of Worcester, Fisk of Brighton and Doyle of Boston, and Representatives Hobson of Palmer, Curtiss of Hingham and Reidy of Boston.

It was authoritatively stated that when the committee took a short recess at the noon hour that by a vote of four to two the committee opposed the Potter amendment introduced in the Senate which would allow the Highway Commission to decide whether or no the telegraph companies should charge for inserting the time messages were filed.

This vote is rumored to be. For the Potter amendment, Senators Potter and Fisk; against the amendment, Senator Doyle and Representatives Hobson, Curtiss and Reidy.

It was said that lawyers for the telegraph companies are now trying to have an amendment suggested by Attorney Wardner of the Postal Telegraph Company to provide that the filing time shall be placed on messages without extra charge only when the sender requests it.

The leaders for the filing time bill say that his amendment would practically kill the bill because the public would not know its rights in the matter.

Attitude of Senate.

It was said att he State House early this afternoon that a majority of the Senators had decided to vote against the Potter amendment. One prominent Republican Senator said:

"I was for the Potter amendment until a little while ago. If our insistence on the Potter amendment means no legislation at all I will vote against it, and I know that the other Senators will do the same thing."

Earlier to-day Governor Draper let it be known that he wanted the Legislature to agree on a bill which unqualifiedly prohibits the telegraph companies from charging the public for telegraphing the time messages are filed for sending. Such a bill has already been passed by the House.

The Governor strongly intimated that in case the Senate did not frame or accept such a bill that he would take most vigorous action. The Governor may send a special message, to prorogue the Legislature to-night or call an extra session of the Legislature.

A big surprise to the members was a letter received to-day by Representative Riley from Henry Howard, chairman of the Public Utilities Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, in which Howard endorsed the Potter amendment as in line with the recommendation of his committee and said that if the Potter amendment were killed there was nothing to prevent the telegraph companies from increasing their general rates for service.

Immediately after arriving at the State House to-day, Governor Draper had a conference with Representative William H. O'Brien of Ward 16, father of the so-called "filing time bill." This measure, as passed by the House, forbids the telegraph companies from charging a fee for the filing time of messages, which they were required to incorporate in their messages by an act of Legislature, and which they announced, several days ago, they would tax the public for.

Opposes Potter Amendment.

At this conference, the Governor stated clearly that he was absolutely opposed to the Potter amendment, incorporated into the O'Brien bill in the Senate, which gives the Highway Commission the option of permitting the telegraphic companies to make the extra charge. The effect of this Potter amendment would be, either to leave a loophole for the companies to escape, or by a disagreement in the House prevent prohibitive legislation altogether.

At the State House to-day no secret is made of the fact that the "Highway Commission" clause was inserted in the O'Brien bill at the suggestion of the telegraph lawyers, and no one else.

Legislative scouts for the big public service corporations knew all about the "Highway Commission" amendment long before it appeared in the Committee on Mercantile Affairs. They knew also that it was to be offered in the committee by Senator Charles D. B. Fisk of Brighton, an old-time enemy of the O'Brien bill.

Senator Elmer C. Potter of Worcester, Senate chairman of the Committee on Mercantile Affairs, and Fisk, who is also a member, did more to help the telegraph companies' side of yesterday's hearing than Attorney Lord did.

SEMI-FINALS NOW IN GOLF CHAMPS

The third round in the Oakley Golf Club's open tournament for State honors was completed this morning, the winners meeting this afternoon in the semi-finals.

State Champion Tom Fuller had a hard match with C. T. Crocker, Jr., and was beaten finally playing the extra hole, Crocker winning one up in nineteen holes.

Former State Champion J. G. Anderson won from A. H. Shaw. J. G. Thorpe and Percy Gilbert were the other winners. The pairing for the semi-finals was Crocker vs. Thorpe and Gilbert vs. Anderson. The results:

THIRD ROUND.

C. T. Crocker, Jr., beat T. R. Fuller, 1 up, 19 holes.

J. G. Anderson beat A. H. Shaw, 5 and 4.

J. G. Thorpe, Country Club, beat Karl Mosser, Brae Burn, 4 and 3.

P. Gilbert, Brae Burn, beat F. H. Hoyt, Allston, 4 and 3.

GOLFERS PLAY AT LEXINGTON

On the Lexington links to-day the open handicap tournament brought out a field of fifty. Three prises were offered, two for best net and one for best gross scores. The conditions were eighteen hole medal handicap play. The morning matches resulted as follows:

"CHANCE" MEN FAIL TO OBTAIN BAIL

Charles S. Stuart and William Sweatt, two of the defendants in the "business chance" cases, who were arraigned yesterday on anew indictment, failed to obtain bail to-day, although Judge Bond of the Superior Court held a special session of court for the purpose of releasing the men i fthey were able to secure bondsmen. It is probable that the men will remain in jail until they are sentenced, Wednesday next.

BOY HELD PRISONER TO STARVE IN BARN

EAST ORANGE, N. J., June 19.—After eight-year-old Leonard Sheck had told how his father, Jeremiah Sheck, had for two days and nights kept him imprisoned in total darkness in a barn, with only a can of stale beans for food, Judge Nott sentenced the father to one year in prison.

DOVEY DEAD STRICKEN ON TRAIN

President of the Boston National Baseball Team Expires of Hemorrhage of the Lungs—Was Apparently in Good Health

George B. Dovey, president of the Boston National Baseball Club, died early to-day on a Pennsylvania railroad train between Cedarville and Xenia, O. He was alone at the time. He was on his way to Cincinnati from Steubenville, where he had been hunting players.

Hemorrhage from the lungs was the cause of Mr. Dovey's death. At Xenia the body was taken from the train and placed in charge of the coroner of Green County. At the same time a telegram was sent to August Herrman, president of the Cincinnati Baseball Club and chairman of the National Baseball Commission. Later the body was placed in care of a firm of undertakers in Xenia.

President Dovey's death occurred at 4:10 this morning. The hemorrhage was sudden and violent.

Car Porter Finds Him Dead.

Mr. Dovey had just managed to attract the attention of the sleeping car porter, but he was dead by the time the porter reached him. There were distinct evidences of internal hemorrhage.

At Xenia Coroner Marquhart was summoned and a short time later August Herrman telegraphed that he was coming to Xenia to take charge of the body. The coroner's inquest is merely a matter of form.

President Dovey left Boston early this month when his club started for the West. He had just come North from a scouting trip for players through the South where he had been unsuccessful.

Appeared in Good Health.

In Steubenville he had met several friends and to all of them as well as to the porter of the sleeping car in which he made his last journey he had appeared to be in robust health.

Mr. Dovey had expected to remain in Cincinnati only a few hours to-day, traveling on to St. Louis to join the Boston club.

John S. C. Dovey, the secretary of the Boston Baseball Club, is with the team. He was notified at once of his brother's death, and he is on his way East now.

Death Shocks Boston.

Never has Boston baseballdom received a more stunning shock than the news today that George B. Dovey of the Boston Nationals, was dead. No man in baseball life in Boston has been more respected and more popular. His purpose to organise a strong baseball team here was warmly applauded by the public.

In national baseball affairs, in the National Commission, George Dovey was always a welcome personage. He would not be five minutes in any baseball meeting or in the corridors of any hotel of prominence without having a group of friends around him.

He was especially well-liked in Western Pennsylvania and in Pittsburg. His aged mother still lives in Latrobe, Pa.

FEAR SIX MEN LOST AT SEA

NEWBURYPORT, June 19.—Six men are believed to have perished or else been driven out to sea in the heavy gale of yesterday. Life saving crews along the North Shore and the police of cities and towns along the coast have been asked to locate the men. They are David Earl and William Currier of the firm of Currier Brothers, and John Patterfield, John Atkinson, John Cilley and Henry Plummer.

The party left here Thursday morning in a cabin launch. A short distance out their engine became disabled. They put into Gloucester and repaired the engine. Then they put out again. They have not been heard from since. It is feared that the engine broke down a second time and the men have either perished or are drifting helplessly about in a disabled boat.

THE WEATHER.

Fair to-night. Sunday, fair and somewhat warmer. Light to moderate west to southwest winds.

LODGE COMES TO DEFENCE OF NEW ENGLAND

WASHINGTON, June 19. — Senator Lodge, speaking on the tariff in the Senate to-day, referred to the assertion made at times as to the influence of New England Senators with administrations, and entered into a long defence of the attitude of the New England States in general and Massachusetts in particular towards protection. He said in part:

"In the course of the discussion aroused by this revision of the tariff a good deal has been said about New England. Some attacks have been made upon that portion of our common country and it has been charged that she has had an undue influence in tariff legislation. The rule of seniority has always been wisely and pretty strictly applied in the Senate of the United States, and if of the seven Senators longest in the service five are from New England that is merely an evidnce of her good fortune to which all other sections of the country can attain if they follow her example.

One Law for All.

"I readily admit that New England has always had a large influence in the legislation and the administration of the government of the United States, but that that influence has been undue or improper or has been wilfully exerted to the injury of any other section of the country I wholly deny.

"I can add nothing to that lucid statement of the foundations of our protective policy and of the attitude of New England in regard to it, made by Daniel Webster in the Senate in 1828, when the famous tariff bill of that year was before the Senate and when Senator Webster advocated a policy of protection.

"There was one law and one policy for the whole country. Every State could avail itself of it. New England made the best of the situation—that was all; and it does not become those who declined to take advantage of what was common to all to censure New England for doing so.

Drove Ships from Sea.

"That protective policy has continued, with fluctuations, but always protective, down to the present time. The only industry to which protection has never been extended is that of the ship owner, which was peculiarly a New England interest in the old days and, owing to our refusal to protect that industry, it has now disappeared from the face of the waters. Driven from the ocean we of New England deserve praise, not blame, that we have turned with undiminished courage to a new scene and won prosperity on the land."

ART MUSEUM PROPERTY SOLD

The deeds of the former Boston Art Museum property, comprising 93,298 square feet, in Copley Square, passed to-day to the new owners, Moses Williams, J. Morris Meredith and John Phillips Reynolds, Jr., trustees of the Copley Square Trust. This completes the sale of this valuable property, which was arranged in 1902, and has awaited completion until the Museum of Fine Arts could erect and occupy its new home.

It is one of the largest parcels in one holding in the central part of the city. The trustees who have thus just come into possession are actively considering plans for its utilisation. While a number of propositions have been brought to their attention, they have reached no definite conclusion, as they wish to treat the development of this large and conspicuous property in a broad and comprehensive manner.

ADDRESS BY STEFFENS.

Lincoln Steffens, representing the Boston 1915 committee, will explain the movement to the members of the Central Labor Union at its meeting at Wells Memorial Hall tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Mr. Steffens address will be on "A Living Wage."

FAST PACE IN GREAT AUTO RACE

CROWN POINT, Ind., June 19.—Denison's car met with a mishap in the backstretch while he was tearing around the course in the big race to-day for the Cobe trophy. The engine broke down, and Denison had a narrow escope from grievous injury.

Denison had jumped to the front in the fifth, leading by one minute and nineteen seconds. Chevrolet was one minute and twelve seconds ahead of Burman. Chevrolitt's time for six laps was 2:27:26.

Chevrolet was in the lead in the seventh lap, with 2:53:05, and Robertson was second.

A. Weight Davis of New York was badly injured when a car crashed into the rear of his machine, throwing him into a barbed wire fence.

A wooded stand situated on the course near the Cedar Lake dip gave way at one corner, causing a panic among the men, women and children crowded into the small space.

Seymour, at the Crown Point turn, swung completely around in the road and dropped off a tire going forty miles an hour. He changed the tire, went as far as the cemetery and tore off another.

The Locomobile No. 6 driven by Florida and the Apperson car No. 3 driven by Seymour withdrew from the race.

Denison in the Stoddard-Dayton passed the twelve-mile mark in twelve minutes flat. The sun was hot and the tar melting on the "S" turn in a greasy mass that skidded each car in an alarming fashion. The ruts in the unfinished stretches were surfaced at daylight, but Denison cut the filling out of them at his high speed.

Bourque in the big Knox completed his first lap, passing Miller in the back stretch in the sensational time of 24:41. Considering the course conditions this was terrific. Miller completed his first lap with the Stoddard-Dayton in 26:23. Bourque drove a hard race in the Vanderbilt and he is driving just as hard today.

COTTAGERS AT HOUGH'S NECK FLEE FLAMES

Hundreds of Summer cottages along the shore at Hough's Neck, Quincy, were threatened to-day by a $5,000 fire, which destroyed two barns and partly burned six cottages and caused scores of Summer residents to flee for safety. A fortunate shift of a high wind and the plucky work of a bucket brigade, organized by sixteen-year-old Harry Kiesele, saved the Summer resort from destruction.

An employe of Mrs. Margaret Lynch of Manet Beach was smoking in one of the outhouses, when a spark ignited a mound of hay, and in a flash the whole building was in flames. The flames spread rapidly to Mrs. Lynch's barn ten feet away and thence to the barn owned by William Jacobs.

The fire alarm was sounded and residents, realizing that the whole resort was imperilled, summoned help from Quincy. Firebrands were blown to all parts of Manet Beach. Harry Kiesele, a High school boy, quickly organized a bucket brigade of twenty-five men and boys, who gave valuable assistance to the Hough's Neck and Quincy firemen.

Harry Kiesele roused Mrs. James Purcell and her babe, who were asleep on the second floor of the Perkins cottage, which caught fire. He guided them through smoke-filled rooms to the street.

Sunlight, Heath, Wild Rose and Perkins cottages were badly burned. Cottagers carried their most valuable personal effects to the beach.

SHIP'S CREW QUELLS PASSENGER PANIC

QUEBEC, June 19.—The steamer Campana, owned by the Gulf of St. Lawrence Company, ran aground off St. Valiera de Bellechasse, twenty-four miles below, while en route from Pictou, N. S., to Montreal, with a large passenger list. A panic ensued on board, but subsided after the passengers had been convinced there was no danger. They were transferred to a ferryboat and taken to Quebec.

DOVEY'S DEATH CAUSES GRIEF TO ALL FANS

a large town about forty miles east of Pittsburg. Here he delighted to visit. The body will most probably be buried there.

BRIEF SKETCH OF GEORGE B. DOVEY, TRUE SPORTSMAN

George B. Dovey was born in Philadelphia in 1862. His father was a rich coal operator, and was one of the first to realize the possibilities of the vast Kentucky coal deposits, and he secured large holdings there. When George and his two brothers, "Billy" and John, the present secretary of the Boston Club, were still boys, the family moved to Central City, Ky., then and now in the heart and the capital of the coal interests of that State.

The boys gave their father valuable assistance in several departments of the Dovey Coal Company, but their Eastern college training and love for athletics came to the surface above business and they took to baseball naturally. They even organized a baseball team among their coal miners, and old-timers say even as measured by the high standards of to-day it was "a crackerjack." The brothers took their team all over the State, even to Louisville, where it held its own and more.

One Brother a Professional.

Baseball was so much a passion with the Dovey boys that "Billy" chucked the coal business for a time and signed up as a second baseman with Chris Von der Ahe, then the magnate in St. Louis, when "Charley" Comiskey, now owner of the Chicago White Sox, was the crack St. Louis first baseman.

For family reasons "Billy" Dovey played under the professional name of Dayton.

While all this was going on George was straining at the leash, and business cares and coal fields were heavy burdens. He wanted to sign, too, and had even picked out the name he would use, intending to call himself George Colby. But just at that time he was in an accident on the amateur diamond which caused him to break his arm, and that forever prevented him becoming a professional player.

Growing interests in the family business made it necessary for "Billy" to go back home, and he finally yielded up his preference and passion and went back to the coal office.

First Met Dreyfuss.

During their trips back and forth on business to Paducah, Ky., the Dovey boys along about 1883 met a young German lad just landed from the old country with whom they formed a lifelong friendship and who has been since and is a tower of strength in baseball. He was Barney Dreyfuss, now owner of the Pittsburg franchise and rated at twice or more a millionaire.

Dreyfus left Paducah about 1890 and went to Louisville to act as bookkeeper for his brother-in-law, a rich distiller, and it was then that baseball appealed not only as a pastime but as a business.

The fortunes of the Louisville club—then in the National League—were at low tide, and Dreyfuss bought it. Not long afterwards there was an opportunity for him to move the club to Pittsburg, and he took with him, as secretary, Harry Pulliam, now elevated to the presidency of the National League.

This is interesting as showing how the early friendship of two young men in a small Kentucky city should afterward become a powerful factor in national baseball. George Dovey, Dreyfus and Pulliam were the stanchest of friends always.

While Dreyfus and Pulliam in Louisville were preparing to make baseball history, George Dovey continued in the coal business, giving up his active interests about 1894 or '95, for other fields.

Friend of Tom Johnson.

He knew the two Johnsons of Cleveland, Mayor Tom L., the famous single taxer, and his brother Al, and they asked him to go North.

He quickly mastered the mechanical end of the street railway business and when in 1897 a group of New York capitalists merged the lines of St. Louis he was employed at a large salary to be master mechanic of the new system.

Business could never quite crowd his first love for baseball out of his busy life, however. He knew every magnate and star player by their first names, and was glad to call them and be accepted as their friend.

He next went to the St. Louis Car Company, which every patron of street cars the country over knows as the probable maker of the car he rides on. He was with this concern when in 1908 the opportunity to buy the Boston franchise offered itself and Dovey decided to go after it. With his share of the family fortune and in alliance with Fred Tenney, who owned an interest in the team, he became the owner of the franchise.

A True Lover of Baseball.

Dovey was a good business man, and had a keen eye to the financial possibilities of his investment, but quite equal to that interest was his love of the sport and his life-long ambition not only to own a big league team, but one of the best.

He never married. His friends rather regarded him as "cool" toward women. With men he was considered a prince. In his earlier days, like his brothers, he was known as a generous spender, but when "Bill" died, about fifteen years ago, George stopped short as a "rounder." From that on, while he was the same "good fellow" to his friends, he absolutely refused to drink anything stronger than mineral water.

ASSOCIATES MOURN DOVEY AS FRIEND AND A SPORTSMAN

The Boston National League Club, in charge of Secretary John C. S. Dovey, brother of the dead president, played an exhibition game of baseball at Terre Haute, Ind., yesterday, and last night left to fill out its series at St. Louis. The team is due to arrive in St. Louis to-day.

W. H. Conant.

W. H. Conant who was the managing director (so called) of the old Boston National League Club and a partner with Arthur H. Soden when the club was sold out to George B. Dovey and his associates, was very much astonished to hear the news.

"Why, George Dovey looked the picture of health," said he. "He was an athlete, and played ball with the team recruits last Spring. I did not meet Mr. Dovey very much, but from what I saw I knew he was a fine sportsman and a thorough gentleman. I am very sorry to hear of Hugh A. McBreen.

Hugh A. McBreen, treasurer of the Boston Americans, was so astounded when he was informed by the BOSTON AMERICAN that he could not believe it and cried out excitedly:

"What! George Dovey dead? That's too bad. He was a prince of good fellows.

"We were all very friendly. He was one of the best men I ever knew. He was square, and ever since he came here three years ago was a friendly rival in every way. We never had any trouble with the Doveys. George Dovey was a high-class baseball man.

"He was a true fan and a royal rooter. He knew all the fine points of baseball and was a credit to the national game in every way. I am sorry to hear that he is dead. The Great Umpire must have wanted some good ball players up above."

John Marsh.

John (Tony) Marsh, who is one of the most loyal baseball rooters in the world, and who was as close to George Dovey as anybody in the world outside of his brother and family, said:

"That is terrible! How did it happen? Oh, that's too bad. I can't understand it. Why, he seemed in better health than for some time. He went away on that last trip in good spirits and in good health.

"But to tell the truth George never seemed to get over that terrible cold of two Winters ago. He was weak for weeks and weeks after that cold, and did not seem his usual self. He was one of the finest men I ever knew.

"He was a real true lover of baseball. He was a credit to the national game. I am sure that the fans in Boston loved him. He tried hard to get a winning team here, for he wanted a fast nine for Boston, which, he declared, was the best baseball city in the country and the fans the fairest and squarest that ever breathed."

John F. Dever.

John F. Dever, clerk of committees, and a baseball rooter through and through, said:

"It's said news. For a stranger coming East to this most conservative of cities George B. Dovey made a host of friends. He was all attention to the patrons of the South End grounds.

"He instituted many changes. The building of the seats in centre field, of the boxes in front of the grandstand and the other innovations showed that he was keen for the interests of the baseball public.

"He was a fine man in every sense of the word. He was very popular here and I am sorry to hear the sad news."

John I. Taylor.

John I. Taylor, president of the Boston American Baseball Club, who is at his home in Dedham, indisposed, said:

"I am very much shocked to hear of the death of Mr. Dovey. I was never more surprised in my life when I heard of it. He was a mighty fine fellow and it is too bad he could not live to build up a ball club such as he was trying so hard to do."

James A. Gallivan.

Street Commissioner James A. Gallivan, an old Harvard varsity ball player, and an intimate friend of Mr. Dovey, said:

"I am very much grieved to hear that George is dead. With other friends I met George several times a week, and last night when George was absent from the little circle we talked of him. He seemed to be in robust health when he went away.

"He was one of the finest men I ever knew. I can't understand it. He worried fearfully about his team, but he was game to the core and never brought baseball troubles to anybody else."

SEVERE BLOW TO LEAGUE, DECLARES ACTING PRESIDENT

NEW YORK, June 19.—The news of the sudden death of President Dovey was broken to John A. Heydler, acting president of the National League, by the BOSTON AMERICAN correspondent. The shock was so great that at first he could hardly believe it.

"Why, I was in communication with Dovey only yesterday," he said, and he gave me no intimation that he wasn't in the best of health. His death is a severe blow to the National League and to baseball and to clean sport in general. There never lived a better sportsman than George B. Dovey.

"He had made a game and able fight against the handicap of a losing club, and was proving at last that his tactics were right. The news of his death will be a shock to baseball men all over the country and to hundreds of others who knew him in his private capacity as a clean, kindly gentleman.

"The last time I met him was in Cincinnati. He was in the best of health and spirits then, and was planning an extensive Western trip in the interest of his club. His last official act probably was the claiming of Roy Thomas, who has just been released by Pittsburg for the Boston team."

Prince Wooes Girl He Thinks Has $50,000,000

Miss Anita Stewart, stepdaughter of the late James Henry Smith, of New York, and Prince Miguel, of Braganza, who was recently reported to have won "Miss M. Vanderbilt" and her equally unidentified fortune.

PARIS, June 19.—Prince Miguel of Braganza, a blond-moustached, handsome, upstanding man of thirty-one years, has been stopping at the Ritz Hotel in Paris. He was not pleased at the headlines in a New York newspaper describing him as "a perpetual fiance."

He believes there is a fifty-million dollar heiress somewhere in existence, and for a time he believed he had found her. For the last ten days he has been accusing Miss Anita Stewart of having those millions, and not receiving any direct denial Prince Miguel gave a big dinner for her at the Hotel Ritz. The guests included all the titled prominent people in Paris, but the seat of honor at his right hand was given to Miss Stewart.

Miss Stewart is the stepdaughter of the late James Henry Smith and has been staying in Paris, first with her mother, Mrs. Rhinelander Stewart Smith, and later with her cousins of New York, the Drexels. She left for London on Tuesday, and the Prince followed. But he remained only one day in order to investigate the story of her millions.

The matrimonial agents, who have a complete list of the marriageable American heiresses, with full details of their fortunes and expectations, informed Prince Miguel that he must be mistaken regarding Miss Anita's money. They quote her as worth $500,000, which was left her by the late Mr. Smith.

TO-DAY'S CABLE NEWS

Up to Midnight, London Time

Kaiser Bids Czar Good-bye; Starts Home.

ST. PETERSBURG—The Kaiser has said farewell to the Czar and started for home. Foreign Secretary Schon of Germany had a conversation of considerable length with Foreign Minister Isvolsky and Premier Stolypin of Russia. Earlier in the day the Kaiser decorated Stolypin with the Order of Merit of the Prussian Crown and conferred upon Isvolsky the Grand Cross of the Red Eagle. The St. Petersburg newspapers have not published a word about the meeting of the Emperors nor even about the Kaiser's arrival at Bjorko. The Rome newspapers announce authoritatively that the Czar and Czarina will be in Rome for four days in October.

England to Tax Autoists.

LONDON—Americans bringing motor cars to England will be liable to a heavy tax unless Mr. Lloyd-George alters his budget proposals. According to his plans visitors from across the Atlantic will have to pay a duty ranging from $10 on the smallest car to $200 on a car of over sixty-horsepower. There will also be the registration fee, and the tax on the chauffeur as a male servant. Thus the American may have to pay as much as $220, even if he is only remaining in England for a few days. This would be killing the goose that lays the golden eggs with a vengeance.

Odd Paris Burglary

PARIS—An actor of the name of Dormelen was brought to trial to-day on a charge of breaking into and robbing the room of Mrs. Eva Bennett on March 2. Mrs. Bennett comes from San Francisco, and she was occupying part of the apartment of Mme. Duroux. She lost a quantity of linen and silver and some $2,000 worth of jewelry. One of the chief points against the accused was that his hat was found in Mrs. Bennett's room.

Yankees to Gain in China.

LONDON—The Times Pekin correspondent says it is regrettable that the British and American governments did not communicate with each other at an earlier stage in connection with the Hankow-Sze-Chuen railroad loan. Good, however, will come of the incident, for it is desirable that arrangements should be made to extend the combine to the American group of banks on a footing of equality.

Woman in Balloon Fall

ST. PETERSBURG—Court Chamberlain Palitkin and his wife made an ascent in an army balloon. When it was at a height of 2,400 feet the gas bag split and the balloon dropped to the ground in two minutes. Palitkin was killed and his wife seriously injured.

New Lloyds Rules

LONDON—New rules are being issued by Lloyds which will become operative forthwith. The main object is to obtain a considerable increase in carrying capacity of vessels and by a redistribution of material to lessen the cost of construction without loss of seaworthiness.

American Flag for Pope

ROME—The Pope gave audience to Bishop McDonnell of Brooklyn, who presented Arthur Colborne, the originator and president of the Anti-Profanity League. Mr. Colborne gave the Pope a large American flag on behalf of the members of the organization.

St. John Hankin a Suicide.

LONDON — St. John Hankin, a noted dramatist, was found drowned to-day in a pool near Landrindod Wells, Wales, where he was staying, with his body weighted down by dumbbells. He was suffering from nervous debility and is thought to have committed suicide.

Cuba has a Navy

HAVANA—The House of Representatives has passed a bill changing the name of the coast guard service to the navy. The House also adopted a resolution asking President Gomez to furnish it with data regarding Cuba's alleged debt to Spain.

Steinheil Case in October

PARIS—The Indictment Court has ordered that Mme. Steinheil be tried in the Assize Court as the principal in the killing of her husband and mother with premeditation. The trial is not likely to be held until October.

To Examine King Edward

VIENNA—Doctor Ott, who has always atended King Edward during his visits to Marienbad, has been summoned to London to examine and report upon the King's condition.

ARGUE NEW TRIAL FOR WARRY CHARLES

A motion to reargue the motion for a new trial in the cases of Warry Charles and Joe Guey, who were convicted of murder in the South End Tong war, was heard to-day in the Superior Criminal Court before Judges Pierce and Brown. The Chinese prisoners were in court guarded by a detail of deputy sheriffs. They were represented by General Charles Bartlett, Harvey Pratt and H. O. Woodman. Assistant District Attorney M. J. Dwyer represented the government. Mr. Woodman read affidavits from Boston Chinese to show that Warry Charles did not incite members of the Hep Sing Tong Society to shoot and blackmail members of a rival society.

MYERS RESIGNS AS BAPTIST HEAD

CHICAGO, June 19.—As the result of criticism of the part he played in a futile attempt to oust Professor George Burnham Foster of the University of Chicago from the Baptist ministry because of the teachings of Professor Foster's book, "The Function of Religion in Man's Struggle for Existence," the Rev. Johnston Myers, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church, resigned as president and superintendent of the Baptist Executive Council of the Chicago conference. The resignation was accepted.

KING OF ITALY GIVES BOSTON GIRL A CROWN

ROME, June 19.—The foreign office has had made a beautiful and artistic reproduction of the ancient Roman civic crown as a hair ornament for Miss Mabel Boardman of Washington and Boston, in recognition of services rendered by her as a member of the American Red Cross to the victims of the recent earthquake in the south of Italy.

The crown, which is composed of oak leaves and acorns made of solid gold, is enclosed in a characteristic Roman box of leather, which is adorned by the royal coat of arms in gold. The ornament is engraved as follows:

> "To Mabel Boardman of the American Red Cross, from the Italian government, as a token of gratitude, 1908-1909."

It will be sent to the Italian embassy at Washington for delivery to Miss Boardman.

Miss Boardman, who is a sister-in-law of United States Senator W. Murray Crane of Dalton, is a power behind the social throne. She is well known in society of this city, New York and Washington.

Her Summer home is at Manchester. More than anyone else she induced the President's wife to select the picturesque North Shore for a Summer capital.

This talented young woman, who was a member of the Taft Philippine party, enjoys the intimate acquaintance of the President and his wife. The Taft party recently showed its appreciation of Miss Boardman by presenting her a richly diamond-studded watch and chain, the presentation speech being made by the President.

Red Cross Leader.

Miss Boardman is one of the most energetic workers in the management of the American National Red Cross.

Not so very long ago the Red Cross Society was badly disorganized. Created in 1882, it accomplished much good under the leadership of Clara Barton. Put to the test during the Spanish War, it proved unequal to the burden. It was aimless in its efforts, lacking in co-ordination, loose and incompetent. Since 1905, when it was reorganized, when Miss Barton stepped aside and the society became an official adjunct of the government, it has steadily progressed, has been systematized and made efficient; has grown and developed, and is now apparently to become an unqualified success. Miss Boardman has been one of the most tireless of those working to bring order and system out of the chaos which previously existed, and no history of the new Red Cross could be complete without large mention of her.

In 1900, when the new organization was incorporated under the act of Congress, Miss Boardman, who up to that time had had no interest in the society, became one of the incorporators at the solicitation of friends who wished some one in Washington to take an active part in the movement. She threw herself into the work with the spirit and enthusiasm for which she is famous in Washington, obtained a grasp of the business of the organization and took a deep interest in its achievements, an interest which has never flagged.

Saw Service in Japan.

Miss Boardman went to the land of the Mikado just after the bloody battle in Manchuria and entered the Red Cross Hospital, caring alike for the wounded Russian and Japanese soldiers. She displayed unusual proficiency in the work, and when she returned to Washington she announced her intention of becoming a government clerk and devoting her time to the interests of that philanthropic movement. Since then she has steadily labored to benefit humanity.

The young woman is the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Boardman, who have a handsome home in Dupont Circle, Washington.

SENATE VOTES FOR MAYOR'S ALMS BILL

The State Senate to-day reconsidered the action of yesterday by which it defeated the bill to authorize the Boston Street Commissioners to license public solicitation of alms. It was popularly called the "Salvation Army" bill. The bill was amended so that the licensing power is given to the police commissioner, with the approval of the overseers of the poor, instead of to the street commissioners. The bill was also amended by changing the word "solicitation" to "receiving," and was then rushed through its several readings and sent to the House for concurrence in the amendments.

MAD PRINCE SEEKS BRIDE IN AMERICA

PARIS, June 19.—The career of Prince Hermann of Saxe Weimar, heir apparent to the ducal throne of Saxe Weimar and Eisenach, has met with a temporary check. He is now in a sanitarium, but is planning to come to America to seek an American girl and the means of paying his debts of $1,250,000.

No one in Paris for the last few months has led a more variegated life. His horses, his gaming, his entertainments and his truly royal gifts to the notorious Mademoiselle Wanda, his debts and his money shifts were the talk of the town. The Prince is now in his twenty-second year. He was placed in the Prussian Guards of Berlin with the rank of lieutenant, and his family give him an allowance of $10,000.

On that modest income the Prince tried to keep up a racing stable, with the result that before a year was over his family, his mother and the Grand Duke Ernst had to pay off his debts of $200,000.

In Paris alone his debts amount to $900,000 of scattered money among gamblers and women. About half the amount owed he got from money lenders and tradesmen, but the other half he borrowed from friends.

His last exploit in Paris brought him perilously near to the edge of the law. He took his mother's pearls, heirlooms of great historic value. He stated that his mother gave them to him to pawn. What he did was to sell them outright to a prominent American then in Paris. With the proceeds he made one last splurge in Paris, trailing with him the beautiful and extravagant Mlle. Wanda, who, as those who know Paris will remember, was launched here by the Duke of Westminster.

By this time the Grand Ducal family decided to put a stop to the mad extravagance of the boyish heir to the ancient duchy. They had him declared a bankrupt, though no publicity was given to the proceedings. So, being a bankrupt, and having worked the continent, Prince Hermann departed to London. His one possession was a letter from the Grand Duke of Saxe Weimar promising to pay him $16,000 on October 4. By showing this freely he got a number of prominent people to back his paper, on which he secured money from the money lenders.

His family at once had him declared insane, and he is now confined in the sanitarium of Hosenmarkt, near Frankfort.

The reigning Grand Duke, who is childless, bitterly hates Prince Hermann, who is bound to succeed him.

STOPS RUNAWAY IN CROWDED STREET

A horse attached to the large dray of Armstrong of Somerville ran away in Court street to-day, several pedestrians barely escaping injury. Driver John O'Connell lost control of his horse as the animal started on a gallop. Police Inspector Conboy brought the horse to a stop after a hard run.

COLLEGE PARTY DRAWS 10,000 TO TENT CITY

Nearly ten thousand persons crowded into the miniature city of tents at University Heights, Newton, this afternoon for the second annual garden party in aid of the Boston College building fund. The party started at noon. At 3 o'clock Father Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of Boston College, broke the ground for the foundation of the recitation building, the first of the group which will comprise the new Boston College. Before the exercises end 20,000 people will have visited University Heights.

Over twenty tents have been erected for the garden party which precedes the formalities of breaking the ground. Three hundred women are in charge of the booths and 600 Japanese lanterns are strung about the enclosure. The largest of the tents is used as an open air restaurant. It will accommodate 500 at a time. Twelve of the tents were secured for fortune telling and goose houses.

During the afternoon a band concert was given by the St. Alphonsus band of sixty pieces. The concert was opened by the playing of the new march, called the University Heights March. It was written for the occasion by Daniel J. Sullivan, composer of the Boston Cadet Shows and Chauncey Olcott's song, "You're as Welcome as the Flowers in May."

A number of prominent guests attended the observance of the breaking of the ground, including Governor Draper, Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, Mayor Hibbard, Mayor Brooks of Cambridge, Mayor Hutchinson of Newton, Congressman Weeks of Newton and Congressman Ansley of Ohio. E. F. Burns read an original poem.

The first sod, lifted by Father Gasson, was donated to Mrs. Margaret Donnelly of Roxbury. Her request was the first to be received and the committee awarded it to her. Parts of it was on sale at her booth during the afternoon.

LOVE LETTERS AID IN MURDER CLEW

victim to the very fate from which her mother had saved hundreds of other girls.

Mr. Sigel, after a long look at the body, which was in a terrible condition, said at first he could not tell whether it was Elsie or not. He maintained that attitude for hours. But when a locket bearing the initials "E. C. S.," a silver bangle bracelet likewise marked and the letters in a young girl's handwriting were taken to the uptown home, where the mother lay prostrated, she exclaimed: "My heavens, Elsie!"

In Chinatown With Mother.

Then Mrs. Florence M. Todd, another Chinatown settlement worker, made the identification absolute by going to the morgue early this morning and looking at the body.

"That's poor little Elsie," Mrs. Todd said. "Poor little girl."

Mrs. Todd is in charge of the Girls' Recreation Room, a mission for Chinese girls at No. 10 Mott street, where Mrs. Sigel was frequently a visitor. Mrs. Todd said Mrs. Sigel had been working for years among the Chinese and was thoroughly familiar with the underlife of Chinatown.

"Elsie and Leon have been thrown together for years," said Mrs. Todd. "Leon was greatly in love with her. Some time ago he went to Philadelphia, but returned and sought out the girl.

"He disliked her to receive attentions from other men, either white or of his own race, and his jealousy had begun to make Elsie afraid of him. The romance between the pious white girl and the man she sought to save spiritually was the cause of this terrible tragedy, I believe."

On her rounds of visits Mrs. Sigel formerly took her daughter, who, as a small girl, was much interested in the peculiar ways of the district. Mrs. Sigel had not been much in that section in recent years, Mrs. Todd and others in the mission said, although she was occasionally seen there. The young woman was known for her deep interest in the mission work and was frequently pointed out as a granddaughter of General Sigel.

According to the story which Mr. Sigel told the police, his daughter gave no warning when she left home June 9. On the 12th, however, he got a telegram from Washington signed with his daughter's name. This telegram, the police say, read "Will be home Sunday evening. Don't worry," and was signed "Elsie."

It is supposed that the man with whom the girl was in love had resolved to be rid of her and induced her to go to the tenement where she met her fate.

One of two persons told the detectives that they had seen Miss Sigel with the young Chinaman at a Chinese theatre about a week or two ago.

The theory that jealousy was the motive back of the girl's death was aided by Miss Mabel Sigel, the first cousin of the dead girl, in an interview to-day. This statement also tended to show that Elsie Sigel probably was killed on June 9th.

"Elsie left her home here," said Miss Sigel, "on the morning of June 9. She had received that morning a postcard from her grandmother in The Bronx asking Elsie to visit her. Telling her parents of the invitation she left home ostensibly for her grandmother's. Subsequent events have proved that she didn't go there.

"I knew about Elsie's getting fond of some of the Chinamen with whom she came in contact at the mission and I didn't approve of what she was doing. I always told her that they were not the kind of people to get too intimate with and I warned her that some day her acquaintance with them would get her into trouble."

Signs of Religious Life.

Of the young Chinaman's own inclinations toward religious life there was plenty of evidence in the room where the body was found. On a bureau lay a Bible in English and Chinese, while the walls bore pictures of the Virgin and the Apostles. In a trunk, which apparently contained Leon's clothing, was a book of gospel hymns.

The building in which the body was found is rented by Sun Leung, who runs a chop suey restaurant, using the third and fourth floors for living purposes. Leon occupied a hall bedroom on the fourth floor. His room adjoined that of Chung Sin on the rear. Chung Sin is another Chinaman of the religious type. He has also disappeared, and the Chinaman who runs the chop suey restaurant on the second floor says that he left when Leon did.

How the Body Was Found.

Sun Leung, fearing that Leon, his cousin, had been murdered because of his long absence, called in the police and the door was broken down.

In front of the bed in the little room was a big black trunk tied with several yards of awning rope. When the police cut this the cover of the trunk flew up from the pressure of the body, which was wrapped in a blanket.

The woman's body had been bent double, head downward and a piece of rope had been tied under the knees and around the back so that the knees were drawn close up under the chin. The lower part of the legs had been doubled back and also tied up. About the woman's neck was a noose made of sash cord. The noose had been pulled so tightly that it was buried in the flesh and the Coroner thought the neck might also have been broken.

Note Found in Man's Room.

The bed in Leon's room was covered with a canopy of rich Chinese silk. On the bureau was a note unsigned, but apparently written by Leon himself and unaddressed, and read:

> I hope you do not get mad with me because all the trouble starts with me. We hope some day that happiness will come to both of us.

In the room also was a geography on the front page of which had been written: "New line to Boston, $2. Harvard University."

On the table was a copy of a New York newspaper of May 17 with an article marked, concerning a young Chinaman named Yung Bing, who had been arrested in St. Patrick's Cathedral for creating a disturbance in a religious frenzy. Yung Bing is a Chinaman inspired by the same religious zeal that Leon showed.

In Leon's room the police picked up a letter written by Henry G. Bunnell, who lives at the Bristol Hotel in West Forty-ninth street. This letter was addressed to Leon and was dated May 13, accepting an invitation to dinner.

Mr. Bunnell is a curb broker. At the Hotel Bristol he said he had met William Leon about five years ago in a Chinese restaurant in Sixth avenue, near Twenty-ninth street. Leon was a waiter in the place then. Bunnell became interested in him and learned that he had come to New York only a short time before after attending a Sunday School in Philadelphia and receiving instruction under the care of some Philadelphia missionary.

It was apparent from Leon's rooms that he had plenty of money. A rent receipt found in the room showed that at one time he was paying $70 a month for rooms at No. 728 Lexington avenue, where his cousin, Joe Leon is now running a restaurant.

There were also notices from brokerage firms calling on Leon to put up margins on stock transactions.

Several Chinamen were arrested to-day, and the police put several of them through the third degree, but they were able to get no important information.

2,000 Letters From Women.

In Leon's room the police found about 2,000 letters written by women from all over the United States. Some of them, the police say, were from Sunday-school teachers. They were all in endearing terms. One was postmarked Brooklyn and signed "Nellie." A telegram also signed "Nellie," and dated March 29, read:

"Am very sick; send me money at once."

SEARCH BOSTON CHINATOWN FOR MURDER SUSPECT

The Boston police to-day began a rigid search of Chinatown in an effort to locate Leon Lee Lin, the young Chinaman whom the New York police want in connection with the murder of beautiful Elsie Sigel, the mission worker. The police believe that the young man is hiding in Boston, as he is known to have several friends here.

Inspectors Conway and Hart, who have run down many criminals in Boston's Chinatown, were assigned to the case to-day. If Leon is in Boston an early arrest is expected.

Leon has visited Boston several times. In the Chinaman's room in New York, where the girl's body was found, was a geography, on the front cover of which was written: "New line to Boston, $2. Harvard University."

The police believe that Leon had been in Boston since the alleged crime was committed, and that he may still be here. If he has left Boston the police feel sure that they will get some tip as to where he is now located.

When the Yale of the Metropolitan line docked to-day the passengers were looked over by a police official in citizens' clothes. All the ticket agencies in Boston will also be visited in case the New York Chinaman may have purchased a ticket for some point in the provinces, Canada or the West.

LITTLE GIRL BITTEN BY A VICIOUS DOG

A vicious bulldog leaped upon little Jennie Depruso of No. 26 Decatur street, East Boston, as she was playing near her home to-day, and bit her severely in the left arm and left leg. Policeman James H. O'Neil was close by and pursued the dog for some distance. He finally caught up with him and shot him. The dog is not believed to have been rabid.

BOSTON'S IDLE ARE IN MISERY, SAYS RICH MAN

"The Hawkins Street Wayfarers' Home is a reproach on the humanitarianism, culture and charitableness of the good people of Boston," said Edwin A. Brown, the rich Denver philanthropist, member of society, and a wealthy relative of one of the heads of the New York Central Railroad, to-day, at the Touraine. Mr. Brown is a kindly, gray-eyed man, still young, who has come here in the effort to stir Boston to building a municipal home as temporary relief for the deserving unemployed man or woman.

"In no city have I seen so much misery in so small a space as from Scollay square to Bowdoin square. Seated in the different beautiful parks of your city I have talked with 100 men out of work. There was in their faces the condensation of human suffering, and I found in every man the ambition for something better and higher. They all are like the Jean Valjean of 'Les Miserables.'

Lodging House Needed.

"How would I better these conditions in Boston? The same method applied in Denver will work here. I shall go to all the different organizations and speak to attempt to convert Boston to the belief in such an institution as the wonderful one-half-million-dollar lodging house in New York city. For the honest unemployed man every city should have a municipal lodging house. It prevents petty thievery, which later develops into worse crime and gives a man an emergency home in case of need.

"When I started the idea in Denver the Mayor there said such a plan would encourage idleness. I thought differently and I had a young man say in New York at their fine place for the unemployed that he felt better after his breakfast at the expense of the city and was going out to look for work with better grit and heart than ever before. That kind of thing speaks for thrift.

"We are finding out that we cannot make men better by abuse. For the derelict, the dope fiend and the drunkard and the petty criminal we will soon, I hope, have State labor colonies where the men will work outdoors, and, although under detention, will at least be treated like men."

Rich, But Saws Wood.

Although a guest to-day at the exclusive Touraine, Brown since his arrival here spent a night at the Wayfarers' Lodge, and like the "human derelicts" who worked by his side, sawed his stunt of wood in the city woodyard for his breakfast. And although he worked hard to get the breakfast free, he could not eat it. He said:

"Dressed in the clothes of a man out of work, a shabby coat, a flannel shirt, overalls and half worn-out shoes, I went out from the hotel and to the lodging house on Hawkins street. I gave up my clothes, which were tied with a string and sent to the fumigator, and then went upstairs to the bathroom and took a bath. Then I was given a nightgown and went to the dormitory. Not all the beds were filled last night, though I should say that in the two rooms I saw there were 100 men of all ages, and many of them sick. There was no medical inspection.

"I didn't sleep much. There were a number of men coughing most of the night.

BISHOP, DRIVEN OUT, FINDS AN ASYLUM

DAVID CITY, Neb., June 19.—Bishop Bonacum of the Roman Catholic diocese of Lincoln, who was driven out of Ulysses by a mob and left to walk across country, arrived at a friendly home here early to-day unharmed. The bishop went to Ulysses to take formal possession of the church which was vacated by Father Murphy, who had resisted the bishop's order of dispossession for several years.

800 JEWELERS AT PROVIDENCE OUTING

PROVIDENCE, June 19.—Nearly 800 jewelers from all parts of New England came to Providence to attend the 30th annual outing of the New England Manufacturing Jewelers' and Silversmiths' Association. After a parade a chartered steamer was boarded and the party landed at a shore resort, where a clambake was enjoyed. Later the boat left for Newport, where the jewelers witnessed the drills at the United States naval training station.

"WIND LEVELS "JOAN OF ARC" SCENIC CITY

Hundreds of workmen are to-day resetting the scenery to be used in connection with Miss Maude Adams's presentation of Joan of Arc at the Harvard Stadium next Tuesday night. The scenery was razed by a high gale, which, sweeping across the big athletic field, wrecked the painted city in spite of the efforts of the workmen.

It had been intended to hold the first dress rehearsal last night, but this had to be declared off on account of the enforced delay in setting the mammoth spectacle, as the high wind not only demolished part of the scenery already set, but effectually prevented the erection of any but the very solid pieces, and, furthermore, all the costumes are not yet ready.

Miss Adams herself is the busiest of them all, and every bit of the work is personally supervised by her, not only that which has to do with the enacting of the pageant, but the work of the laborers as well; and she has scrutinized every plank that has gone to make up the inclines on which the horses must go, and used the utmost care that the spectacle may be presented without mishap.

During the morning she pranced about the arena on the beautiful white charger she is to ride, and he behaved splendidly on all the hills so far created in the canvas city. After the ride she busied herself with a thousand and one little details that are yet to be attended to before all is ready.

In the afternoon Miss Adams was the guest of the Harvard Dramatic Club at a lawn party given in her honor on the pretty lawn of the Harvard Union. It proved to be a delightful affair, and many of the most distinguished members of the Harvard faculty were present, besides a choice representation of Cambridge society.

The vivacious actress received for nearly an hour, and the members of the club presented her with a dainty little medal and made her the first woman honorary member.

It had been announced that Charles Frohman himself was to be present, but this was not the case, though Joseph Williams, Miss Adams's personal manager, was on hand.

James Savery was in charge of the fete, and under his directions the grounds had been converted into a fairy bower, in which crimson A's and H's played an important part. The ushers were Club President E. E. Hunt, R. E. Rogers, Daniel Carb, William Wendell, Alan Gregg, B. Douglas and J. A. P. Millett.

Among those noted at the gathering were Professor and Mrs. Kittredge, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Professor and Mrs. George Pierce Baker, Dean and Mrs. Briggs, Professor and Mrs. Winter, Professor Schofield, Mrs. Addington Luce, Mrs. Savery, Professor and Mrs. Hugo Munsterberg, Mr. and Mrs. Moot, William Rice, Wilfred North and many others.

A Physician Cures His Wife Of Consumption

It Costs You Nothing to Try the Same Treatment.

Gentlemen:
"My wife was down with Consumption when I ordered a bottle of Aicsol (Lloyd). She was very weak from night sweats, cough and in a feverish condition. I noticed a change for the better after ten days' treatment and from that time on up to three months when the cure was completed. Aicsol (Lloyd) kills the Tubercle Bacillus in the blood and tissue and it is the only remedy so far discovered that will do this. It is a preventative as well as a cure. It should be used by those who are run down or those who fear the approach of Consumption. It can be truthfully said that Aicsol (Lloyd) for the cure and prevention of Consumption is the most wonderful compound of the present age."
DR. W. H. KNIGHT, Swampscott, Mass.

This is only one of hundreds of similar letters from leading physicians and grateful patients that we have received and have on file in our office.

So sure are we that Aicsol (Lloyd) is a successful treatment for Consumption and Chronic Bronchitis, and that you will feel its beneficial effects inside of fifteen days, that we will gladly send a full month's treatment to any sufferer who will send us their name and address.

We make no conditions except that you take the treatment for fifteen days, according to directions. Should the results be such as to make you absolutely sure that a continuance of Aicsol (Lloyd) will cure you, you are to remit us $5.00 for same and continue the treatment until it is all used. If, after taking the treatment for fifteen days, you are not satisfied with the results, you are to return the unused portion of the treatment to us and no charge will be made for that which you have used.

Judd Q. Lloyd, the eminent scientist who discovered this wonderful preparation, was on December 15, 1908, awarded a diploma of merit by the London Society of Science, Letters and Art, in recognition of his valuable services to mankind in discovering Aicsol (Lloyd), the only known successful treatment for consumption. The society was established in 1881, for the purpose of meriting the one greatest achievement in scientific discoveries each year, in each country.

Aicsol (Lloyd) is a perfectly palatable preparation. You take absolutely no risk whatever, for Aicsol (Lloyd) must be entirely satisfactory to you before you pay us one cent. The burden of the proof is entirely on us. What Aicsol (Lloyd) has done for others it should do for you. Send your name and address to-day, state nearest express office and we will send you a full month's treatment for trial with full directions. Restorall Chemical Co., 503 Lloyd Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

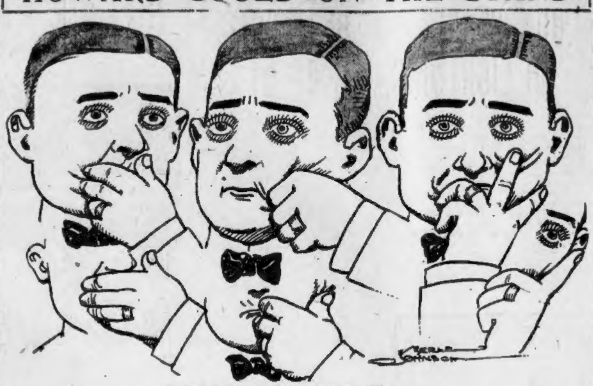
HOWARD GOULD ON THE STAND



Sketched in Court by Boston American Artist.

When Howard Gould was testifying in the separation suit of his wife, Katherine Clemmons Gould, the former actress, who demands $125,000 alimony, he showed signs of nervousness and frequently tried to hide his face with his hands. The hearing of the case will be resumed Monday. These sketches were made while he was on the witness stand.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS: FINANCIAL NEWS

STEEL AGAIN UP IN NEW YORK

By T. C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, June 19.—New York Central and Atchison shared honors in the early trading in the stock market to-day. The former advanced half a point and the latter one point. These gains were made on a small volume of transactions. Atchison's strength was due to the increased estimate of the wheat yield in its territory, while Central was accumulated presumably for the account of the Union Pacific.

Steel shares displayed strength and rose fractionally. Copper stocks were also high. There were evidences of profit taking in the Interborough Metropolitan shares. Trading was very dull during the first hour of the session and at times the ticker came to a halt.

American shares opened lower in London under pressure of realizing sales. Covering of shorts in the steel issues caused a general recovery of the losses. Copper shares were in better demand because of an extra disbursement by the Rand.

Larose consolidated sold at the new high record of eight on the curb market. There was a good demand for Nevada consolidated that was reflected in a gain of one-quarter of a point. Other copper and silver shares were steady.

SKULL FOUND IN EX-SULTAN'S CELLAR

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 19.—The commander of the gendarmerie of Beshikmash, in the rear of the Yildiz Palace here, reports that he has found in a cellar where the former Sultan's victims were imprisoned a box containing a skull supposed to have been that of Midhat Pasha. Midhat's head was brought to Constantinople by Abdul Hamid's order to prove that he was really dead. He was Grand Vizier in 1872 and again in 1876-'77. He was born in Bulgaria, and died in Arabia in 1884.

WOMAN'S WOODEN LEG SEIZED BY LAW

DES MOINES, June 19.—Because her wooden leg had been listed as household property, Mrs. Charles Harridin was compelled to unstrap the mechanical member at the knee and lay it on top of the other humble household goods which were carted away under a mortgage foreclosure. Sobbing, Mrs. Harridin pleaded with the loan company to leave her the wooden leg, as she was helpless without it, but her entreaties were in vain. She hid it in the bed, but the hiding place was found.

WALL ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

WALL STREET, New York, June 19.—A close syndicate deeply interested in the market, especially in Steel common, bought approximately 100,000 shares of stock. Technically there is an improvement in that the market had been relieve of a mass of stop orders and of a number of mushroom pools.

It cannot be said, however, that even in the experience of the last five days there has been much comfort or encouragement for short sellers. The decline was handled as cleverly as had been the previous long advance; in other words, those responsible for stock exchange affairs have shown themselves to be as adept in adversity as in prosperity. Seeing that some liquidation was inevitable, the liquidation process was permitted to proceed without creating fundemental alarm. Tact and discretion were evidenced throughout.

Strategists think that it would be unwise to restart the market upward at once. If that were done the market, they believe, would encounter blocks of stocks whose holders had been made ready to relinquish because of the recent uncertainty. On the other hand, if the list be kept steady without much change in quotations a surer feeling will be instilled in the speculative community.

President Taft's plan of taxing the net earnings of corporations is brought up as an argument against an advance in the prices of stocks. Leading financiers favor a tax on dividends, because that would not involve any scrutiny of corporation affairs. A tax on net earnings, however, would force the government to fix arbitrarily a system of accounting in order that the net earnings might in every instance be arrived at in the same manner. It would inevitably be found that no two corporations were calculating their net earnings according to the same system, and the arbitrary establishment of a new system would result in large increases in some cases and large decreases in others. There would be a wholesale readjustment of prices of the securities of those corporations. Concealed assets would be disclosed. The first effect would be unsettling, but when once thoroughly established such a system would be highly desirable, because the public could then determine with some precision the relative merits of the various stocks dealt in on the echange.

New York Central is the strong feature in Wall Street. While every other stock was weak, it refused to yield and crept upward when the general list improved. The buying of Central seems to come from Harriman sources, and is undoubtedly due to the coming combination with Harriman lines, as exclusively detailed in this column. Private cables from Europe intimate that Harriman has already succeeded in financing the big deal. Some announcement is expected in about four weeks.

Central's price cannot be justified on any other theory, for its dividend is too low for a stock selling at 130, and it is in a vulnerable position with important litigation possible against it on vital points. Brokers with complete knowledge of the proposed Harriman deal are cautious about buying the stock, for while they believe in its ultimate destiny they fear its immediate future.

The secret of the mysterious strength in Interborough-Metropolitan stocks proves to be the escape of the company from payment of a franchise tax on the subway. The company had been assessed $9,000,000 for this purpose, but avoids payment on the ground that it is leasing the subway from the city. The case is now through the court of last resort.

Actual harvesting of Winter wheat is causing experts to raise their estimate of the crop. It now seems certain that Winter wheat will yield more than 400,000,000 bushels, that figure being named as an absolute minimum. The increase in yield is due to the free use of fertilizers by the farmers. The farmers have been enjoying great wealth the last few years, and with their mortgages paid off they have been improving their farms to such an extent that this year's crops promise to bring forth several surprises. Kansas alone now estimates its Winter wheat crop at 90,000,000 bushels and that fact is back of the strength of Atchison.

Gould companies reported increases of earnings all along the line, and Wabash preferred responds. Rumor persists in making a deal for Wabash, the most popular being with Lackawanna. Careful investigation fails to reveal anything substantial beyond heavy transactions in the stock, presumably for the account of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Judge William H. Moore. These two traders are in position to put through a deal should one be considered desirable.

Announcement has come that the British government had requested the American government to bar the New York bankers out of the Chinese railroad loan. It is known that President Taft will insist on American participation in that loan on the ground that such business is included in the "open door" policy. The New York bankers are not anxious for the small commission involved in this loan, for they will get only a few millions of it. They desire to participate as a matter of principle, because their failure to do so might deprive the American government of the right to have a voice in devising the scheme of taxation that China may adopt.

AMALGAMATED DOWN TO 81

STATE STREET, June 19.—Noon—There was nothing of importance in the two-hour session of the stock exchange this forenoon. Trading was of a desultory nature, and no significance was attached to the narrow fluctuations which ensued. The week has been an uninteresting one so far as local stocks are concerned, and the week-end was a fitting one.

Amalgamated was offered down to 81, largely on arbitraging with New York and Sugar was also weak for which the same reason can be assigned. Utah Consolidated stiffened slightly to 43 on a few transactions, while there were no sales of North Butte, although the market was quoted 57 to 57½. East Butte was quiet and heavy around 12⅝, and Shannon was steady at 15½. Shannon rights continue to be in good demand.

There was also a lack of animation in the Curb trading, although prices held firm in that exchange. La Rose touched 8 and Chino held its high at 9. Southwestern Development was inactive at from 23 to 25 cents. A raid in Bay State Gas brought the stock down to 45 cents.

STEAMERS SUCCEED SAILING VESSELS

BANGOR, Me., June 19.—The latest of the large water transportation companies to abandon the sailing vessel in preference to the steamships is the Coastwise Transportation Company. It has contracted for two 8,000-ton steamships, each to cost about $500,000. According to the latest statistics forty-seven sailing vessels disappeared from the Atlantic coastwise fleet in the past year. The new steamships will be used in the coal carrying trade between Philadelphia and New England ports.

GARDEN PARTY NOW POPULAR WITH SOCIETY

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

The garden party with all its gentle gaiety and charm is with us again. Al fresco affairs, lavishly de luxe, are the vogue of the season, and at the Country Club, where the races are in progress, the luncheon or afternoon tea on the terrace is quite the smart thing.

Among the leaders in these affairs is Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, who has just returned from abroad. Society has already abandoned the indoors and is literally living, yes, and even sleeping, in the open.

Our own Lady Paget was among the foremost of the hostesses in England to set her seal of approval on these out-of-door affairs, and has given some elaborate ones in her beautiful English gardens with royalty as her guests.

* * *

Mrs. John L. Gardner entertains at luncheon to-day at her beautiful estate, Green Hill, Brookline, and then takes her guests on to the races. Among those in the party are the Rev. and Mrs. Francis Boyer, the latter a niece of Mrs. Gardner, and their house guest, Edward Cripps, Jr., son of the Hon. Edward Cripps of Cobham, Eng., who came over with the Boyers on their recent return from Europe. Mr. Cripps spent some time after arriving in New York, but is now with the Boyers at the Gardner estate in Southboro.

In about ten days Mr. Cripps will start for Vancouver, and upon his return will visit the Boyers and Gardners at Monument Beach. The Rev. Mr. Boyer has been studying for the past year at Oxford, Eng.

Mrs. C. Rockwood Hoar has closed her house in Washington for the Summer, and is at the Hotel Wolcott, New York, for several days, before going to Massachusetts. Mrs. Samuel Hoar, who has been visiting friends at Pride's Crossing, has joined her.

The engagement has just been announced of Miss Odilee Gertrude Burnham, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. F. A. Burnham of Saco, Me., to John Clifford Gray of Arlington, Mass.

Classmates of George Wigglesworth of Milton are to be entertained by him at his Summer home at Manchester-by-the-Sea on June 29. Mr. Wigglesworth graduated from Harvard in the class of 1874.

Miss Dorothy Draper of Beacon street will be informally presented to a small circle of Hopedale society people next Tuesday. Mrs. Draper and her daughter expect to sail for Europe later in the Summer.

One of the quieter June weddings took place this week when Miss Martha Starr Wellington, daughter of Mrs. Henry W. Wellington of Beacon street, was married to Ralph Montgomery Arkush of New York. Rev. Paul Revere Frothingham performed the ceremony.

George Packard of Boston attended the bridegroom when Miss Phoebe A. H. Mears, formerly of Brookline, was married to Wilkie Baldwin Hollander at Germantown, Pa., on Thursday. The bride is the daughter of Henry Haller Mears, who is well known in Brookline circles. He gave his daughter in marriage, and Mrs. Horatio Harris, sister of the bride, attended as matron of honor.

Mrs. John E. Alexandre of Lenox is entertaining her father and mother, General and Mrs. Alexander Webb, at her summer home.

The George Westinghouses have as their guest at their Lenox Summer place the Rev. Dr. R. DeWitt Mallery, president of the International College at Springfield.

Rear Admiral William T. Swinburne, a native of Newport, has taken the Wilks place on Everett street for the Summer. He has let his New York residence for the season.

Boston families among the Newport colony will be interested in the two dances which are being planned for debutantes in Newport this Summer. One will be given at the Newport Golf Club by Mrs. Barger Wallach for her daughter, Miss Jennie Wallach. Mrs. John R. Drexel will give the other at the Drexel residence for Miss Alice, her daughter.

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Heatley to the Rev. Linden H. White, pastor of the Episcopal Church in Fall River, is one of interest to Boston people. The Rev. Ernest C. Tuthill, curate of Trinity Church, Boston, attended the bridegroom as best man, and the bride carried a prayerbook presented by Bishop Lawrence. The bridesmaids were Miss Evelyn Coombs of Springfield, Miss Jeannette R. Woodward of New York, and Miss Margaret Heatley and Miss Eva Ellms of Fall River. The ushers were Spencer Greene of Pawtucket, Harold Smith, Ransom W. Morse, and David and Thomas Heatley. Mr. and Mrs. White sail to-day for Europe, where a honeymoon of several mouths will be spent.

Mrs. George von L. Meyer, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, and her daughters, have just arrived in New York from a visit in Rome. The despatch boat Dolphin met them with the Secretary on board. The family will spend the Summer on the North Shore. The Secretary, however, will return to the Capitol after seeing them settled at the Summer place in Hamilton.

* * *

Boston frequenters of Newport will be interested to hear that Louis L. Lorillard, chairman of the house committee of the Newport Reading Room for many years, has resigned and will not be at his regular post this Summer. Dr. Henry Jennings Knapp is filling his place temporarily.

* * *

Mrs. William Howard Taft is to leave her Washington home about the first of July for the Summer residence at Beverly. Professor Louis More of Cincinnati and his young son John, Mrs. Taft's brother-in-law and nephew, are guests at the White House this week.

Mrs. Preston Gibson, who usually spends the Summer at Beverly, will join her grandmother, Mrs. James McMillan, at Manchester for the season.

Commodore and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and family are soon to be at the Summer place, Beaulieu, in Newport.

Bar Harbor is to claim Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Wysong this Summer. They leave Newport on Monday.

TEST 300 BIG MEN FOR POLICE FORCE

Nearly 300 applicants for patrol duty on the Boston police force, the largest number in recent years, took the civil service examination in the State House. The men were among the biggest who have ever appeared for examination. The result of this test will be known in a month and the successful candidates notified to appear for physical examinations, of which there are two.

7-YEAR-OLD GIRL HURT BY RUNAWAY

A pair of gray horses attached to a coal wagon and driven by Albert John, became frightened at an electric car on Pleasant street, near Maiden square, Malden, and dashed down the street, striking the car and slightly injuring one of the passengers, seven-year-old Alberta Carson.

Three men who were on the wagon with the driver were thrown off, but only slightly injured. They were John Callahan, Cornelius Cahill and Denis Murphy.

WOMAN, 74, IS SAVED FROM DEATH IN FIRE

SALEM, June 19.—The Colonial building at No. 22 Conant street was damaged by fire to the amount of from $1,500 to $2,000. The house is owned by Mrs. Harriet A. Abbott, who is seventy-four years old, an invalid, and obliged to walk with canes. She was taken from the house by Patrolmen Jeremiah J. Day, Samuel A. Staples and Orrin Caras.

SENATE POLL SHOWS MAJORITY WILL VOTE FOR AN INCOME TAX

A systematic poll of the United States Senate by the AMERICAN indicates that a sweeping majority is willing—many enthusiastically—to have the constitutional amendment authorizing Congress to impose and collect an income tax submitted to the States, through the Legislatures, for adoption.

Republican Senators generally declare the belief that their States would approve the plan. Senator Depew is one exception. He says he doubts if New York would ratify it.

But at the same time Republican leaders assert that there must be no side-tracking of the proposed Bailey-Cummins income tax amendment to the pending tariff bill. This they insist shall be disposed of without waiting for the formalities of putting the Taft plan into effect.

The Bailey-Cummins proposition is for a 2 per cent. tax on all incomes above $5,000, providing, however, that in all cases where an income is derived solely from corporation dividends, if it can be shown under oath that a person assessed does not derive $5,000 from such source, he shall be reimbursed by the treasury for the 2 per cent. tax that has been paid by the corporation from his share in the dividends.

In canvassing United States Senators the AMERICAN asked each to state:

Whether you will vote for an amendment to the Constitution authorizing the Government to tax personal incomes; and whether, in your judgment, your State would approve such an amendment.

Following are some of the replies:

JACOB H. GALLINGER (Rep.), New Hampshire—I will support the proposition to submit a constitutional amendment to the respective States.

HENRY E. BURNHAM (Rep.), New Hampshire—I am in favor of the constitutional amendment.

CARROLL S. PAGE (Rep.), Vermont—I shall vote for the resolution to amend the constitution.

NELSON W. ALDRICH (Rep.), Rhode Island—Certainly I will support the President's recommendation.

GEORGE P. WETMORE (Rep.), Rhode Island—I am in favor of the suggested constitutional amendment.

SIMON GUGGENHEIM (Rep.), Colorado—I am in favor of the amendment. I think it is the very best thing to do.

CHARLES A. CULBERSON (Dem.), Texas—I shall vote for the plan to submit a constitutional amendment if we cannot get an income tax law at once.

JOSEPH W. BAILEY (Dem.), Texas—I don't think a constitutional amendment is necessary, but of course I shall support the proposition if we can get nothing better.

BENJAMIN R. TILLMAN (Dem.), South Carolina—There is no doubt in my mind how South Carolina would vote on an amendment to the Constitution providing for an income tax. In my opinion the entire South and the best part of the West would favor an income tax amendment.

ALBERT J. BEVERIDGE (Rep.), Indiana—I shall vote aye.

ALBERT B. CUMMINS (Rep.), Iowa—I have no objection to the constitutional amendment, but I shall first vote for the income tax amendment to the pending tariff bill. I will oppose the constitutional amendment if it is offered in opposition to the enactment of an income tax law now.

T. H. PAYNTER (Dem.), Kentucky—I will vote for both propositions. The Bailey-Cummins amendment, providing for an income tax, is sound, and in my judgment constitutional. I will vote for it gladly. If the resolution to amend the constitution comes up I will favor it as simply strengthening the principle of taxing incomes, fair and just and wise, and clearly within the powers of Congress.

RATES CUT BY CUNARD LINE

NEW YORK, June 19. — Steamship agents throughout the country have been notified that the minimum rate on the Cunard liners Lusitania and Mauretania in the first cabin will be $123 instead of $127.50 as heretofore. Vernon H. Brown, general manager of the Cunard line in America, when asked as to the reason of the $2.50 reduction in the rate on the two big ships, said that so far as he knew it was simply a question of an equalization of rates, and had no special significance regarding any disagreement among the Atlantic steamship lines.

$21,000,000 DEFICIT IN FRENCH BUDGET

PARIS, June 19.—The budget for 1910 was introduced in the Chamber of Deputies by Finance Minister Caillaux, and shows a deficit of $21,000,000. Nine million dollars of this is charged to the budget of 1911. The minister recommends that the remaining $12,000,000 be raised by a new tax of a cent a litre on the petroleum used in automobiles, a tax on dogs, administrative rearrangement and a stricter enforcement of the taxes on colonial obligations and mines, and a new tax in connection with the inheritance of property.

ELOPES WITH BOY; HELD AS KIDNAPPER

PHILADELPHIA, June 19.—Tearfully declaring that it was not a kidnapping, but an elopement, Fanny Muszicat, twenty-three years of age, of No. 2,226 Fifth avenue, who was arrested in this city with her fourteen-year-old nephew, is held to-day. She was brought before Magistrate Scott, and the magistrate, after hearing the evidence, said he was compelled by the law to hold the woman without bail on the charge of kidnapping the boy. When she heard that she was to be sent to prison the young woman cried out that she wanted to marry her youthful suitor. The lad, whose name is Michael Muszicat, is in the House of Detention on the charge of being a runaway.

T WHARF NEEDS A SHERLOCK HOLMES

The pressing question at T Wharf to-day is how the thief who stole the sea porcupine from the deck of the fishing schooner Monarch got away with his loot without using gloves.

The porcupine was on deck in his barrel cage when the crew turned in. He wasn't there when they turned out. Somebody heard a noise on deck once; then laid it to a dream. But unless the intruder was a hypnotist of rare ability it wasn't a dream, but a nightmare.

"I hope he got stung," more than one of the men on the schooner said to-day.

DR. PIERCE MADE SENATE CHAPLAIN

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The Rev. Dr. Ulysses Grant B. Pierce, pastor of All Souls Unitarian Church of this city, has been designated by a Senate resolution to act as chaplain until otherwise ordered.

Mr. Pierce is a pastor of the church which the President attends and succeeds the Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale, deceased. Dr. Pierce was born in Providence in 1865 and took a post-graduate course at Harvard.

FREE PICTURE SHOWS BY CITY ON FOURTH

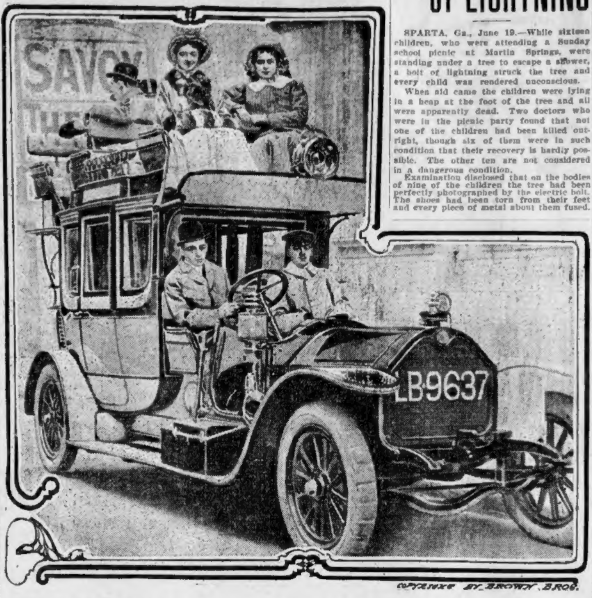
Plans for the celebration of the coming Fourth of July by the city were mapped out by the City Council committee in charge of that work. They provided for the expenditure of the greater part of the $10,000 appropriated.

The committee voted to spend $2,750 for fireworks on the Common, at Franklin Field and at Wood Island Park. There will be spent $2,165 for band concerts, and $1,000 for the rowing regatta on the Charles River. The sailing regatta and the athletics on the Common will cost the city $350 and $450 respectively. The Veteran Firemen will get $200 for their annual play-out on the Common. The committee will arrange for free moving picture shows in various parts of the city.

HYDE HOST TO 25.

Twenty-five employes of the F. Gray Company, corner Washington and Hanover streets, are loud in praise of the way they were entertained by the proprietor, Mr. Hyde, at his Summer camp, Sudbury River. There were baseball games and other sports and a dinner.

BYRON CHANDLER, BAY STATE MILLIONAIRE, EARNS ROYAL FAVOR



This is the first picture to reach America showing Byron Chandler's famous auto-stage, which is rivalling A. G. Vanderbilt's "Venture" in trips from London to Brighton. The young millionaire is seen at the right of the auto's front seat, with Mrs. Chandler (Grace La Rue) on the left above, and the Princess Eulalie Leprieto at her side.

LONDON, June 18.—Within the week, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's famous coach to Brighton has been confronted by a most formidable rival in the new auto-stage which is catering for favor against him. This gasoline opponent is the property of Byron Chandler, the "Boy Millionaire," of Boston, who was divorced by his wife in America last May, married Grace La Rue, the actress, in London as soon as a ship could take him there, and has since pitted a great deal of money and large social aspirations against those of Mr. Vanderbilt and his set.

Royalty and society in general seem to be quite taken with Mr. Chandler's rival "coach," and some of the most notable have deserted Mr. Vanderbilt for the auto-stage. His wife, who rides daily with him in his trips from the Savoy to Brighton, is also a divorcee, and has been until very recently an actress in "The Follies of 1907."

She divorced Charles H. Burke, a vaudeville performer, in 1907, and only awaited the divorce of Mr. Chandler to marry him.

The Chandler auto-stage is said by its owner-chauffeur to be run only for his own amusement, but he charges $25 for the round trip from London to Brighton's Metropole Hotel.

The "Redskin" runs four times a week to Brighton, and twice a week to Windsor. Within the present week Mr. Chandler has been "host" to no less than a dozen members of European royalty, and his stage is crowded at every trip.

Mr. Chandler's open claim for custom as against the Vanderbilt horse-drawn stage is the fact that he makes the trip to Brighton in two hours and a half, whereas the "Venture" consumes six and does not return until the next day.

BABY DESERTED BY AUTO PARTY

WARREN, June 10.—Whizzing up in an automobile to the house occupied by Bronsilow Sliski, on the main highway from Worcester to Springfield, in the early morning, somebody, on whom the State authorities are endeavoring to fasten the abandonment, laid upon the doorstep a two weeks' old boy and then whizzed away at top speed. The noisy approach of the car had aroused the people in the humble farmhouse and they were peering out curiously when a figure stepped briskly from the auto, took a few rapid strides to the doorstep and thereon deposited a tiny bundle, which might have been anything but a baby to the view of Sliski and his family, who had but a dim outlook through the drizzling rain. Meanwhile the lights of the automobile had been extinguished, the better to shroud the mysterious visitors in gloom.

As the car sped down the road, Sliski opened the door and found a baby contentedly sucking at a bottle of milk and crowing as cheerfully as if a midnight spin in a touring car, only to be deserted at a stranger's house, was the most appealing experience in the world. The little one was wrapped in two blankets, which bore no mark that might lead to identification.

The hostler at Joseph St. George's livery stable recalls having seen a big auto, dark in hue, going in the direction of the Sliski house at about 12:30 o'clock.

MRS. TEAL MUST REMAIN IN JAIL

NEW YORK, June 19.—The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court has confirmed the conviction of Mrs. Margaret Teal, wife of Ben Teal, the theatrical manager, of attempting subornation of perjury in the divorce case of Helen Kelley Gould against Frank J. Gould.

Mrs. Teal is now in Blackwell's Island prison, serving the term of a year to which she was sentenced. She was convicted of having attempted to induce Mabel MacCausland, a young woman with stage aspirations, to give false testimony against Frank J. Gould in the action brought by his wife.

TROOPS LOST WITH VESSEL

SEVASTOPOL, June 19.—The Russian military transport Ingul has been wrecked in Tapsay Bay in the Black Sea and many soldiers were drowned, according to a report received to-day. Details of the accident have not been received.

16 KNOCKED OUT BY BOLT OF LIGHTNING

SPARTA, Ga., June 19.—While sixteen children, who were attending a Sunday school picnic at Martin Springs, were standing under a tree to escape a shower, a bolt of lightning struck the tree and every child was rendered unconscious.

When aid came the children were lying in a heap at the foot of the tree and all were apparently dead. Two doctors who were in the picnic party found that not one of the children had been killed outright, though six of them were in such condition that their recovery is hardly possible. The other ten are not considered in a dangerous condition.

Examination disclosed that on the bodies of nine of the children the tree had been perfectly photographed by the electric bolt. The shoes had been torn from their feet and every piece of metal about them fused.

GREAT CROWDS AT WONDERLAND

Bunker Hill Day brought a big attendance to Wonderland Park. A clown trio was added to the corps of park entertainers and a greater number of shows were given than at any previous day this year. The "Prophet and Princess," "Golden Graces," vaudeville minstrels and moving pictures gave many performances and the big riders worked overtime.

Already these shows are rehearsing new goods for the coming week when the Wonderland crowds will be swelled by SUNDAY AMERICAN guests with free tickets to the park and its attractions. Changes and improvements are made each week in all the great park productions, so that every visit means seeing something new.

Among the new comers in the vaudeville open air theatre for next week will be the Musical Millers, Gertie Le Claire and her pickaninnies in eccentric dancing.

The Golden Gate Minstrels will present new poses. New films and songs are scheduled for the moving picture show. The "Prophet and the Princess" has new scenery and nothing is lacking to take the visitor back to the days of King Herod, the Princess of Galilee and the destruction of John the Baptist.

The minstrels will perform for the SUNDAY AMERICAN readers Monday and Tuesday. A ticket of absolutely free admission to the minstrel show, together with free admission to the park gate, are included in the list of fourteen tickets to be published in to-morrow's SUNDAY AMERICAN. The others, twelve in number, are for 10-cent attractions where a nickel and a ticket give admission, or for 5-cent attractions, where a nickel and a ticket give two admissions.

Get the SUNDAY AMERICAN early, clip the tickets and have the time of your life Monday or Tuesday.

CLASS LEADER DIES IN RIVER

METHUEN, June 10.—Having acquitted himself with honor in his studies preparatory to entering the high school, Stanton E. Fearon, the thirteen-year-old son of Jacob E. Fearon of this town, was drowned within an hour after receiving his diploma.

At the conclusion of the graduation exercises the boy, together with several schoolmates, made the usual hurried trip to the Spickett River, where, at a place called "the Dyke," they have been in the habit of bathing since the advent of warm weather.

Unable to swim, young Fearon ventured beyond his depth. He made no outcry, but several of his companions, realizing his danger, tried to save him, but without success.

WORTHEN, DEAN OF LIFE-SAVERS, DEAD

PROVINCETOWN, June 19.—Edwin P. Worthen, long called "dean of the life-savers," because his period of service exceeded that of any other keeper or surfman, is dead. He was seventy-two years of age. He had been in the service nearly thirty-five years, receiving his appointment as keeper of the then non-existent but ordered Highland life-saving station, December 14, 1872, and continuing uninterruptedly as keeper there until July 3, 1907, when a wasting sickness compelled retirement.

GARFIELD TO TELL CABINET SECRETS

CLEVELAND, O., June 19.—James R. Garfield, ex-Secretary of the Interior, has turned author. He is at his home at Mentor grinding out "copy" for a book which will reveal some of the inner workings of the Roosevelt administration. It is said that he will tell some of the cabinet secrets of the famous tennis cabinet meetings, and also something about tennis as played by the man who recently kept things humming around the White House.

BISHOP IN STRIKE WAR.

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Bishop Chandler of the Episcopal Church of Georgia was agreed upon as the third arbitrator in the dispute between the Georgia Railroad Company and its firemen.

REVIVE DEAD BY MASSAGE OF HEART

NEW YORK, June 19.—In the last few years some remarkable and extreme measures have been resorted to in the attempt to revive persons apparently dead. About four or five years ago the direct application of manual massage to the heart was first described; that is, the chest cavity was actually opened, and the heart itself was manipulated by the hand. The results are thus described in the Medical Record:

"Of the forty-five cases in the literature seventeen patients were resuscitated, nine with complete recovery. The remaining eight died after a short time. It is worthy of note that forty cases demanding this extreme measure are said to have been due to the anaesthetic administered, which, if true, is of itself sufficient admonition to those who are inclined to look upon the giving of anaesthetics as a matter of small moment, inasmuch as it seems so uniformly safe. Causes other than anaesthetics were embolism in the pulmonary artery, strangling from attempted suicide by hanging and asphyxia in the new-born from some obstruction in the larynx or trachea.

How Massaging is Done.

"If the heart stops, and ordinary measures do not suffice to renew the beat within one minute, especially if the patient is lapsing into 'white' syncope, the author says the direct method is indicated. Massage through precordial incision usually fails, the best incision being in the mid line above the umbilicus and just large enough to admit the hand.

"The heart is grasped and pushed toward the anterior thoracic wall, and the ventricles are squeezed rhythmically at about the normal rate of heart beat. Sometimes fully fifteen minutes elapse before any response is obtained. During all this time assistants should be busy with artificial respiration, saline and adrenalin infusions, tongue traction, intubation or tracheotomy, and elevation of pelvis and legs.

Surprises are Frequent.

"Heart massage must, it is said, be begun within five minutes from the cessation of the pulse. One must never lose sight of the fact that one cannot be sure, absolutely sure, that any person is dead because the vital functions can no longer be detected by our necessarily crude methods of examination.

"Surprises sometimes occur in which a patient seems to come back to life after suspension of vital function has existed for some moments. Since the dividing line between life and death is of such extreme narrowness as to defy all human attempts at determination and definition, one may well be glad to make use of such a measure as direct cardiac massage in those cases, especially where we have no reason to suspect disintegration of indispensable organs through disease."

BONAVITA BADLY BITTEN BY LION

NEW YORK, June 10.—While trying to train a savage African lion at Bostock's Animal Show at Coney Island, Captain Jack Bonavita was so badly clawed and bitten to-day that it was feared for a time he would be killed.

Half a dozen trainers and other attaches of the new show rushed to Bonavita's assistance and fought for nearly an hour before the enraged beast subsided. They fired volleys of revolver shots to scare the animal and these aroused the whole of Coney Island.

Bonavita has only one arm. The other was lost three years ago in an encounter with a lion. Although badly hurt he will recover.

Just How a Chorus Girl is Made—Every step is told in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

BULL FIGHT SHOWN AT KEITH'S THEATRE

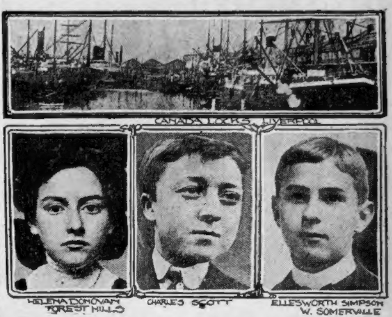
A cowboy's fight with a Mexican bull in the arena in Mexico City was graphically shown by moving pictures at Keith's Theatre. In attendance was the entire company from 101 Ranch, for the cowboy who fought the bull was a member of the 101 Ranch show, and the fight took place when the show was in Mexico. The cowboy, William Pickett, attacked a regular fighting bull unarmed, and clung to its head for seven minutes and a half. The infuriated Mexican audience wished to see him killed, and hurled bottles and knives, cushions and everything within reach at him. The pictures recalled the scene to the members of the Wild West Show, and they cheered and applauded as though they were witnessing the actual struggle.

NEWEST AIRSHIP NEEDS NO WINGS

PATERSON, N. J., June 19.—Robert W. Barker has the very newest motor. He thinks he has discovered how to get over such forces as gravitation and atmospheric pressure and to travel at a speed sufficient to go from New York to Chicago in an hour and a half.

It's all to be done by centrifugal force, and Mr. Barker says he is now organizing the Barker Company, backed by local capitalists, with $500,000 capital. Mr. Barker declares that his motor will travel in any direction through the air without propellers or wings, and will assuredly revolutionize land and sea voyaging. It may even be good for inter-planetary communication.

ONE WEEK MORE LEFT IN TOUR RACE; HUSTLE WITH SUBSCRIPTIONS



Three candidates and a scene the winners will see.

ONE week more from to-day the last vote will be cast in the great Race Around the World Contest. One week from to-day the last subscription will be received, its vote value credited, and the contest will come to an end.

REMEMBER, next Saturday, June 26, at midnight, the polls will be closed, the ballots will be counted, the totals will be verified and as soon as possible the result will be announced and the names of the winners printed in the BOSTON AMERICAN.

Then, within a few days after the fortunate boys and girls have had time to get ready, the winners will get on their marks, and the gun will be fired that will send the four boys racing around the world, the four girls on their trip to Europe, and the twenty-five boys and twenty-five girls on their sight-seeing trips to New York, Washington and Niagara Falls.

Will Eclipse All Races.

The race around the world will eclipse all races in history. Marathons, auto races, special train flights—all will be eclipsed by this tremendous effort.

This will be a race Around the World to break the world's record—a race to lower the record for the time around the world—a race that will be across oceans, across countries, through cities, over plains, and ending at the starting place—a race of more than 25,000 miles.

There are only a few days remaining of this great contest to decide the winners, not alone in the race around the world, but for the other trips as well. Have you made up your mind that YOU will be one of the boys to race around the world; that YOU will be one of the girls to tour Europe; that YOU will be one of the boys and girls that will go on the AMERICAN sight-seeing trips?

It is up to YOU now!

Somewhere on the other side of the earth the two teams of New England boys that go racing around the world, one going east and the other west, these teams that started back to back in Boston, will meet and flash past each other, headed for the same goal, but going in different directions.

Maybe they will have time to shout a greeting to each other. Maybe they will have time to shake hands and compare notes over the half the world that each has crossed. Maybe they will only have time to wave a greeting to each other as their trains or boats pass. Maybe they won't even see each other as their paths cross beneath us, away off on the other side of the world.

Don't you want to be one of those boys to win the race or one of the girls to go to Europe? Then get in your votes now and get your name among the first four. Hundreds of thousands of votes are being polled every day, and more than half of them are polled by boys and girls not among the first four on the list.

"Dark Horses" at Work.

Do you know what that means? It means that some dark horses are spurting forward. It means that the last of the race is to be the hottest part of it. Also it means that the first four boys and girls on the list now and when the contest ends will have to work and WORK HARD up to the very last minute of the time that remains in which to vote.

Do you think that anybody is going to run away with the prize. YOU, if you think you are on the top of the list, must work and work as hard as you can if you want to win. This is not going to be an easy race; it will be a race to the end.

Remember the boys that leave Boston will be racing not alone against each other, but also against boys from New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles. In each of these cities the Hearst newspapers are making preparation to send boys racing around the world. They, too, will try to break the world's record and beat the boys from New England.

It means much more to you to be a winner in this contest than just the glory of being a winner. Victory will mean a proper start in life. It will mean a great boost up the ladder in the affairs of the world. It will mean that you have made a start towards the top.

Get to the Top!

Get to the top. You can do it if you will try. There is no boy or girl competing for one of these prizes that is not capable of being a leader, if their energy and their efforts were directed in the proper channel. NOW is the time to work. Now is the time to get these paid-in-advance subscriptions, which above all, you need to get into one of the twenty-nine prize winning positions.

Do not forget that there are twenty-nine prizes for boys and twenty-nine prizes for girls. Only four boys will be sent racing around the world, only four girls will be sent on the tours to Europe; but, there are fifty rich consolation prizes—fifty American sight-seeing tours, twenty-five for the boys and twenty-five for the girls.

Each of the winners, whether of the major or the consolation prizes has the privilege of selecting his or her own escort or chaperone—the boys a male adult escort and the girls a female chaperone. They may be your parents, a relative, neighbor or anyone of your friends, just so they are acceptable to your parents and to the BOSTON AMERICAN.

Get out and work now. Get out and work with all the energy and determination at your command. Get the subscriptions. Bring them in to the Around the World Department and get their vote value credited to you.

There are eight days of voting left. To-day and to-morrow are holidays, there is no school on those two days. If you will hustle you have opportunity enough to overcome any leader, to make up any lead that any of your rivals may have.

Get BUSY, BUSY, BUSY!

Army Has Candidate.

Uncle Sam's soldiers who are stationed at Forts Warren, Andrew and Strong have come out in indorsement of Ida M. Sullivan as the Army candidate. Sergeant Walsh at Fort Warren, Sergeant O'Donnell at Fort Andrew and Sergeant Burns at Fort Strong are working might and main for Miss Sullivan and have pledged themselves to see that their candidate wins one of the four European trips.

The Hebrew Independent Club of Ward 9 has pledged its support to Ida Sacks, of No. 30 Emerald street, Boston, for one of the twenty-nine prizes for girls. A committee headed by Councilman Isaac Gordon, Alfred Horvitz and Israel Levin has been appointed to secure subscriptions for this candidate and to see that her name appears among the first twenty-nine when the winners are announced. This plucky young miss made a big jump in the last two days of voting and has earned a place in the roll of honor.

What's the Use of Fighting If You Can't Fight all the Time

OPEN TO-NIGHT TILL 9.

That's the idea exactly. We would not have dared to tackle the big Piano Trust if we thought of quitting at any stage of the game. My! How the Trust did brag about putting us out of the business. But that was years ago. We have been fighting ever since, and what fun we have had cutting and double cutting and scalping and slashing at Trust Pianos. Once when a particularly scrappy member of the Trust was fighting us for a customer who wanted to buy said scrappy member's particular pet piano, we gave the customer the piano and paid the cartage to boot. It cost us a pretty piece of money to indulge in this sort of a battle, but what's the use of fighting if you can't fight all the time? Don't start anything that you can't finish. Some fine day we're going to finish the Trust, and then you'll see the prices of pianos down where they belong—where we've had them for years. Come up this week and get a swell bargain in any of the best makes while the fur is flying. 96 beauties will be put on the sacrifice floor.

$5 Down--$1 a Week

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little—go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

FREE RHEUMATISM CURE

A Home Cure Will Be Given FREE By One Who Had It

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have it know, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy, and doctor after doctor, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bed ridden with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I will send a free trial of this precious remedy by mail, postpaid to any sufferer who writes for it. Just fill out the coupon below and mail it to me to-day.

SCHOOL TRACK MEET WON BY HOLMES BOYS

The Boston grammar schools held their annual outdoor track meet at Wood Island Park this morning, the Oliver Wendell Holmes track team winning with a total of 15 points. Dudley was second with 9, and then came St. Francis de Sales, 8; Edward Everett, 7; Agassiz, 5; Prince, 4; Robert G. Shaw, 3; Quincy, 3; Parkman, 3; Bigelow, 2; Hemenway, 2; Brimmer, 2; Rice, 1; St. Columbkill, 1; Pierce, 1.

In the baseball game for the grammar school championship Emerson of East Boston beat John A. Andrew of South Boston, 4 to 3. Score:

		r.	h.	e.
Emerson	1 0 0 0 1 0 0 1 1	4	10	3
Andrew	1 0 1 0 0 1 0 0 0	3	8	3

Batteries—Carey and Barry, Sullivan and McCuddy.

There was one accident in the track games of a serious nature. In the 100-yard dash Vincent Slocker of the Adams School of East Boston strained his stomach and threw his left hip out. He was taken to the East Boston Relief Hospital. Summary:

100-yard dash—Won by R. Philbrick; second, G. Trorille; third, C. Rich. Time—11 2-5s.

50-yard dash—Won by J. Lalley; second, H. Cahill; third, L. Rumpford; fourth, A. Fish. Time—6s.

220-yard dash—Won by G. Sands; second, C. McQuirt; third, W. Stuart; fourth, O. Esstein. Time not taken.

Shot-put, 8 lbs.—Won by S. Henderson; second, J. Lyons; third, G. Sands; fourth, G. Marsh. Distance—37 ft. 10 in.

Broad jump—Won by O. Epstin; second, W. Stuart; third, C. McQuirt; fourth, M. Lavery. Distance—17 ft. 6 in.

High jump—Won by W. Ryan; second, J. Neurse; third, E. Gremer; fourth, J. Kelly. Hight—4 ft. 7 in.

M'ALEER WAS GREAT JUDGE OF FLY BALL

"Were it possible for Jim McAleer to confer upon his outfielders but a fractional part of the skill with which he used to judge balls hit to the outfield the Browns' chances for the pennant would be immeasurably increased," says Elmer Bates. "It would not be exactly fair to some of the most wonderful players the game has ever known to say that McAleer was the greatest outfielder that ever lived, for Jim did not have the throwing arm of an Evans or a Birmingham to back up his sensational catches, nor the batting eye of a Lange to supplement his airship journeys after the ball. Indeed, the history of the game abounds with the names of greater all-around outfielders than the aggressive manager of the St. Louis Browns. One niche in the baseball hall of fame, however, McAleer occupies alone. No other player that ever lived could so accurately judge from the very crack of the bat itself where the ball was going, or, having formed this judgment, could so quickly get to the spot and capture the sphere. Curt Welch was a wonder. Jimmie Fogarty was a marvel. But Jim McAleer was a veritable wizard. Some of the catches he has made on the ball fields of the country linger in the memory of the fans. McAleer never took any particular credit to himself for these phenomenal catches. He said that it was an intuitive power that enabled him to judge from the sound of the bat the direction and the speed of the ball."

NO BASEBALL FOR DONLIN.

NEW YORK, June 19.—Mike Donlin, who captained and played right field for the New York Nationals last season, has written to a friend here that there is no chance of his playing ball this season and that he will make only a short stay in New York on his return from California next month.

Donlin says he has engaged passage to Europe for himself and his wife and will sail on July 15. He adds that reports of his illness have been much exaggerated.

TRADE UNION TEAMS IN BASEBALL BATTLE

A nine made up of baseball enthusiasts from the business agents of the various trade unions of Boston, with "Bill" O'Neil and "Joe" Hunt for a battery, has been secured to try conclusions with the strong team of Armstrong Drivers and Helpers Union No. 612, and the game will be the feature of the seventh annual picnic of that local at Rocky Point, R. I., tomorrow.

The excursion train, which will convey the picnicers to Rocky Point, leaves the South Station at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning, returning in season for a late supper at night. A large following of union men from the numerous locals in Boston are planning to take in the game, and the shore dinner which follows.

JOHNNY KLING TO BECOME A MAGNATE

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 19.—St. Joseph, the largest city in the United States without organized baseball, is to have a recognized team, if plans of Western League magnates do not go awry. Johnny Kling, it is said, is about ready to take over the Pueblo franchise, rejuvenate the team and give Northwest Missouri's metropolis real baseball.

King's recent three-hour conference with Dick Cooley of Topeka was cited as an indication that Kling wants to get at the game. It was declared the entire conference was over three pool tables Cooley wanted to buy, but gradually information has leaked out which tends to infuse hope in the hearts of local fans.

Pueblo has been steadily losing financially and President O'Neil is said to have delivered his ultimatum that the team must be taken care of.

The Harvard varsity baseball team plays its last game to-day prior to the series with Yale, Pennsylvania State being the opponents of the Crimson. Penn State is a newcomer to the Harvard schedule, but has a record which gives promise of an interesting contest.

Play will commence at 2 o'clock, and it is likely that both Hartford and Hicks will pitch.

Penn State has been obliged to cancel its most important games with Princeton, Cornell and U. of P., but has defeated Michigan by 9 to 7, Annapolis 9 to 3 and Bucknell 4 to 2. The Brown team, which won two games from Harvard, defeated Penn State 5 to 4, but only after the Penn pitcher was hit in the face by a batted ball when his team was leading.

GOLF GOSSIP
NEWS OF THE LINKS

It is interesting to see a Britisher is entered for the United States open championship that starts at Englewood, N. J., next Thursday. Tom Vardon is the aspirant from the other side, and if names have anything to do with the playing of a contestant he should certainly romp away a winner, as did his brother Harry when he made a tour of the best golf courses in this country in 1900. While the United States professionals do not feel any concern over the possibilities of this individual it adds interest to the meeting to have him here.

Walter J. Travis, Findlay S. Douglass, Fred Herreshoff, Max Behr, Robert C. Watson and Oswald Kirby are the leading amateurs entered for the U. S. open championship, all players from the New York district, who have been heard from as topnotchers in the amateur ranks.

Brae-Burn appeared to have a strangle hold on the Windeler shield that was played for on the first day of the Massachusetts State championship, but the Country Club with fewer players and more class managed to turn the trick and get this trophy for their club until the next State championship.

Mayor M. F. O'Connell of Fitchburg was one of the qualifiers in the State championship this year. He used to play in all of the open events here in the Boston district before he took the Mayor's chair, and his entry in this meeting was not anticipated as his golfing time is now limited.

The drawings for the State meeting brought none of the candidates for first honors together in the first round. In fact, one can say that the drawing was most evenly balanced. T. R. Fuller, the present champion, and J. G. Thorpe, a past title holder, are in the first half, while A. G. Lockwood and J. G. Anderson, two former winners, are in the lower division of the drawing.

NOONAN TO JOIN WILKESBARRE.

PITTSFIELD, June 19.—Peter Noonan, who has been playing first base for Pittsfield, has resigned to go to Wilkesbarre of the New York State League. He will report there Monday. Noonan was last year with the St. Louis Nationals and this Spring was coach for the University of Maine.

Notes of the Red Sox Game

It's a shame to let even Brockton beat the Red Sox, but Cutting, the Brockton pitcher, had the real goods.

* * *

Quite a number of Boston rooters caught the 10 o'clock express and rooted for the Red Sox.

* * *

Tris Speaker and Heinie Wagner were the only members of the team who were not in the game. Speaker's place was filled by Harry Niles and Larry Gardner filled the bill at shortstop. This is the first time Larry has played with the team. His showing was nothing out of the ordinary, but he played a passable game.

* * *

The team went in automobiles, and it looked like an auto parade when they filed into the field at Brockton.

* * *

Gessler had a goat when he went to Brockton, but he hasn't any now. Mr. Cutting now possesses the angora. "Doc" managed to fan three out of the four times he went to the plate. The one time he did hit the ball, he raised a puny fly to Donovan.

* * *

Little Hickman certainly put up a contest that would have done honor to Larry Lajoie. His work around the keystone cushion was hot stuff and his one error was made on a hard chance.

* * *

Mr. Murch, who receives his cash from Steve Flanigan for guarding the third cushion, administered an awful clouting to the horsehide. He had a pair of hits that totaled five bases. His triple came near hitting the Bull Durham bull in centre field, but missed by a few feet.

* * *

Brockton is a good baseball town. In hopes of seeing a good game (and the hopes were realized) about 2,500 fans attended.

Burchell was batted from the slab at the end of the fifth inning. Steele relieved him and was found for three hits.

* * *

* * *

* * *

All the bugs wanted to see "that man they traded Cy Young for," meaning, of course, Charlie Chech.

* * *

The Red Sox were lucky to escape the whitewash brush. Two singles and infield outs scored their only run in the seventh inning.

* * *

Shannon, shortstop of the Brockton team, was the real goods. He produced three singles, two of these scoring the two winning runs.

* * *

Cutting, the Brockton twirler, allowed but five well scattered hits.

* * *

McConnell was hit an awful lick in the ribs with a pitched ball in the third round but did not leave the game.

* * *

Many of the Brockton rooters felt depressed when Flanigan sent Cutting to the slab, for he was rated as their "second best" in the twirling, but the Red Sox don't care for any more of his benders.

* * *

Waters, though a tiny little fellow, is certainly an active agent. The way he went after foul balls was a good example to a few backstops that are in the big leagues.

Baseball News and Notes

Manager Harry Lumley of Brooklyn has signed "Lanky" Anderson, the University of Maryland pitcher. Anderson pitched five shut-out victories for the college nine this spring.

* * *

Carl Lundgren, the Cubs' castoff, is pitching good ball for Joe Kelley's Toronto team.

* * *

It looks strange to see Rochester leading the gin at the bottom of the Eastern league percentage way to find out how Rochester stood was to begin at he bottom of the Eastern league percentage table.

* * *

McAleer's St. Louis players declare that Criss is the champion "sky-denter" of the world. They say that several balls hit by Criss have come down covered with snow, and that one didn't come down until after the game was over, when it was caught by the groundkeeper.

* * *

Little Rock has been the surprise of the Southern league season so far. The Memphis team, which was expected to show how games are won, is fast on the rocks.

* * *

The Columbus "Clymers" are gradually climbing upward in the American Association, but Milwaukee still looks to be the best bet.

* * *

Bulletin 2,765, from Kansas City, signed Kling, denies any intention of playing with the Cubs this season. Following bulletin 8635B, from the Cubs' office Saturday, to the effect that he would play the season out for $6,000, it leaves Eager Subscriber in a vacillating state of mind.

* * *

What is Berger, of Cleveland, putting on the ball? He has fanned seventy-eight men in nine games, an average never equaled even by Rube Waddell. In twenty-two games last season Berger fanned only 101 men.

* * *

Claude Rossman, since he was deposed as Detroit's first baseman, has been used as pinch hitter five times, and five times he has gone out without accomplishing anything.

* * *

Jiggs Donahue has become fearfully slowfooted. The other day he was thrown out at first on a hit into right field.

* * *

Purtell, of the Sox, is playing such elegant ball that Comiskey doesn't know what to do when Parent gets well—whether to bench Tannehill or Purtell, or keep Parent off the array.

* * *

Mr. Kerin, of the American League staff is the most emotional strike caller ever heard. He puts his whole soul in it.

* * *

Now comes the startling and amazing information that Jake Beckley's days as manager of the Kansas City team in the American Association are numbered. "Old Eagle Eye" will not be decapitated at the first date set for his execution. When he was in the big league they had to have him quit playing first base year after year for a decade. And still he stuck.

* * *

One Stallings apparently is trying to get a corner on all the pitchers in the American League. When Cleveland talked of letting Falkenberg go Stallings was present with the statement that he would not waive. Wonder how Larry Lajoie feels? Joe Cantillion handed him Falkenberg and Altizer for $10,000. And Larry will probably get back $3,000.

Danzig, the Giant first baseman, from the coast, who went to the Boston Americans and was released, is playing ball for St. Paul in the American Association. Danzig certainly looks the ball player if any man ever did.

* * *

Hoblitzel, the Cincinnati Red first baseman, is not yet twenty years of age. He certainly should develop into a star.

* * *

Umpire Bill Evans is armored from head to foot and the bleacherites can laugh joyously when the foul tip slams Billy if they are so inclined. It doesn't hurt.

* * *

The management of the Washington Senators has come across with the first offer of the season. Ten thousand dollars for the boys if they cop the pennant in the American League. Why not make in $1,000,000? It won't have to be paid.

* * *

"Billy" Murray and "Kid" Gleason are the Siamese twins of the National League and Murray declares that Gleason will have a job as long as he (Murray) is manager of the Phillies.

* * *

Several big league managers still sigh sadly over the fact that the great Cuban pitcher, Mendez, is a black man. This fellow is as good as any white pitcher in the business, and would do wonders in the big leagues.

* * *

Jimmy Austin, who starred for a few days at short for the Yanks, has been replaced again by Knight. The former Baltimorean played a pretty game on his reappearance and will probably hold the job for almost a week. Such is the baseball life in "the Big Show."

* * *

It is said that John Ganzel draws down a salary of $6500 from Rochester and that if he finishes not worse than third he gets a bonus of $1500. If he wins the pennant his reward will be a fine house and lot in Rochester.

* * *

There is no use trying to get Kid Elberfeld to pull away from that plate. It doesn't make any difference how much the pitchers try, the "Kid" stands up there just the same.

* * *

The Cleveland club is going some these days and it looks as if they will make it very interesting from now on.

* * *

It looks as if Jimmy Sebring's days are over as a ball player of big league style. Sebring was looked upon as one of the best players in the business, but he couldn't keep on the straight path. Every club in the National and American leagues has waived on him the manager of the Brooklyn club has announced that he will be either traded or be sold outright to the Milwaukee club. Ball players say that when Sebring was Sebring he was some ball player.

* * *

A Kansas City lad endured torture to stretch himself two inches so that he could become a "Middy." Ketchel has that scheme beaten. He gets some extra height by wearing high-heeled shoes.

* * *

Husk Chance is credited with the assertion that the Pirates are playing beyond their speed and he only fears the New York Giants in the pennant race. Of course it is natural that the great Cub leader would hold in contempt a team that could only beat his champions seven straight in Chicago this year.

RICH RACES FOR COUNTRY CLUB WINDUP

COUNTRY CLUB, Brookline, June 19.—With the star programme of the two days' meeting set for decision this afternoon, the windup of the annual Country Club races at Clyde Park, the attendance came very close to that of Thursday. Particular interest was manifested in the Grand Annual for a purse of $2,000 and a cup valued at $200, to the winner, and the Middlesex steeplechase.

In the former race over the timbers there was a grand array of entries. Though picking up the top weight of the lot, 160 pounds, yet Grandpa was the one picked to win the rich prize. It was a question whether Sir Wooster would face the starter. Thursday he was so badly off that he was kept in the stable, brought about by a bad shipment from New York here, he being on the cars nearly twenty-four hours on one of the hottest days of the year.

The Middlesex was for three and one-half miles, one mile further than any steeplechase ever decided at this course. For this reason there was much speculation concerning the result. Ten horses were slated to accept the penalties, and with the few scratches the field was plenty large enough to produce excitement in the result. Vaquero, on his win the last time out, was favorite.

For the National Hunt Cup Fincastle and Prince Hampton held the place of honor in the experts' opinion. Preceding the steeplechase races four events on the flat were decided.

JACK JOHNSON

CLOSE RACE IN AMERICAN LEAGUE
FOR THIRD PLACE

JACK JOHNSON IN FIGHT TALK TO AID CHURCH

John Arthur Johnson is a busy agent. Also a versatile one.

Shortly after his arrival from Australia he announced that he never felt better than when he was kept busy, and he has not missed an opportunity since coming to Boston.

Early yesterday morning the heavyweight champion of the world, automobile enthusiast, vaudeville artist, connoisseur in diamonds and fancy waistcoats, etc., etc., arose and consulted his valet as to his day's engagements. Here is what he found:

Hour's practice at auto driving.

Consultation with attorneys over suit filed by Pete Walker.

Ditto on suit of Alex McLean.

Meeting with McLean to settle suit.

Visit to stock brokers to figure up profit and loss.

Selection of patterns for three fancy vests.

Issue another defiance to Jeffries.

One hour's training stunt at the Armory A. A.

Acceptance of offer to fight Battling Johnson in Los Angeles.

Call on Judge Parmenter and pay fine for leaving his auto stand unattended on the street, said fine being five plunks.

Issue an edict that either Mish Murray, Eddie Smith or Jack Welsh must referee his bout with Al Kaufman. Otherwise deal is off.

Notify Sandy Ferguson that the Chelsea man has no chance of a fight with the black champion.

Make arrangements for auto trip to New York, thence to Philadelphia and Atlantic City.

Lecture at Cypress Hall, Cambridge, for the benefit of the Rush A. M. E. Zion Church.

That was about all, and the big black man got away with it, and had time enough to spare to receive notification of another suit filed by Alex McLean for $5,000 for breach of contract.

The day's work for the champion was finished at the close of his lecture in Cambridge, which was voted a decided success by the big crowd of colored brethren which attended.

Johnson Introduced.

The champion appeared at Cypress Hall on schedule time in his big motor car, accompanied by his wife, and was introduced by Rev. Dr. J. Frances Lee of the Rush A. M. E. Zion Church, who said:

"You will witness to-night a feature which, so far as I know, has never taken place before in the history of the world. I heard that Mr. Jack Johnson was in Boston, and I was struck with the thought that he would be a man that would like to talk for my church.

"The more I thought it over the more convinced I became that even if he was a man of the ring, he had a Christian mother, a Christian training, and that in spite of his great fame he would speak for our people. (Applause.)

"So I went to his hotel and saw him. I told him what my errand was, and he gladly accepted it, and he is here to-night. He has kept his word." (Great cheers.)

Ignores Fight Question.

Johnson was clad in a tuxedo suit, a drab vest, showing a vast expanse of shirt front from which glittered two dazzling diamonds. His tie was black. Other diamonds sparkled from his big hands.

Just as he was about to begin his address some one yelled, "Will you fight Jeff?" a question that provoked wild applause. Without appearing to notice the question, Johnson began:

"Ladies and gentlemen, my reason for coming East after landing in this country at Vancouver was to try and get a match with Mr. James J. Jeffries. He had some things to say before I had met Burns and whipped him in Australia, and he has had some things to say after I whipped Burns.

"I came through to Chicago and posted $5,000 for a match with Mr. James J. Jeffries. Failing to hear from that gentleman, I came to New York, and there placed $5,000. I waited and waited, but have never heard from Mr. Jeffries. (Laughter.)

Wants to Meet Live Ones.

"After seeing Mr. James J. Jeffries all this time in a gentlemanly manner and he not seeming willing to meet me, I am satisfied now that he and I will never fight. (Applause.) The reason for this is that he is growing fat, and I don't care to meet a man who comes out of retirement.

"I want to meet a man, or men, who are alive and who are not taking on too much flesh. I want a real live one. Then let the best man win.

"In England I met the best men there. In Ireland, in Italy, in Australia I met their best men, and in conquering Tommy Burns I became the champion of the world. (Loud cheers.)

"I am going to meet in the near future Stanley Ketchel, in twenty rounds, at San Francisco. I am also going to have twenty rounds with Al Kaufmann. I am meeting new men who are looking for honors, and not men just out of retirement.

Leaves Boston To-day.

"I am leaving Boston to-morrow. My stay here has been pleasant. I shall go to New York, then to Atlantic City, then to Pittsburg and on to Los Angeles.

"I am to meet an unknown, and it looks to me as if it will be Nathan Johnson. You can bet your neckties and collars that I will win. I will try to defend the title; it makes no matter who the man or men are.

"The battle will be won on its merits. I bid you good night. I believe that I have done some good by coming over here to this city of Cambridge." (Cheers and applause).

As Johnson departed toward Boston cheers followed him and his wife.

Caramallo Lippo, Boston's Paperweight Boxer

The midget boxer looks like an infant when standing beside a man of average size.

His fighting face.

He has a wallop in each hand.

MIDGET BOXER TO CAMPAIGN IN ENGLAND

Caramallo Lippo, "the caramel kiddo," is the smallest professional prize fighter in the United States, and it would take a healthy hunt through all the countries in the world where boxing flourishes to find as small a wielder of the mitts.

To look at him walking along the street one would think the little fellow a joke as a pugilist, but he is far from that, for when he dons the gloves and gets out in his ring attire, he looks like a sure enough prize fighter.

Lippo's home is in Boston, and once when training for a bout he secured Sandy Ferguson, the largest heavyweight in the ring, as a sparring partner. Of course they didn't spar long, for Lippo barely reached Sandy's waist line.

Lippo fights in the paperweight class, and when in training weighs in the vicinity of 84 pounds, 130 pounds lighter than Jim Jeffries was when he left the ring. So far Lippo has been greatly favored with success. He has fought fifteen professional fights, won four of them via the knock-out route, had five draws and won the remainder of the bouts on points.

Lippo plans to travel to England, "to pick up a little easy money" by meeting some of the English paperweights.

WILL KEEP UP TRACK.

The Douglas track at Louisville, Ky., will be kept in order for the harness horses. Douglas Park is recognized as one of the best plants in the country and the present management is keeping it up.

WOONSOCKET TO HOLD RACE MEET JULY 12

WOONSOCKET, R. I., June 18.—Barton A. Cook, secretary, treasurer and manager of the Woonsocket Trotting Park, announces that the harness racing season will be inaugurated here with a five-day meeting, to open on Monday, July 12. The sum of $4,800 in purses will be offered, $300 in each event. Entries will close with Secretary Cook on Tuesday, July 6. Hillsgrove, in this State, will have a meeting the following week.

On Monday, July 12, the card at the local track will comprise a 2:23 pace, a 2:30 trot and a 2:10 pace. The offering on Tuesday will be a 2:27 trot, a 2:27 pace and a 2:25 trot.

The schedule for Wednesday comprises a 2:17 pace, 2:20 pace and 2:23 trot. A 2:19 trot, a 2:16 trot and a free-for-all pace is the order of things for Thursday. The meeting will close on Friday with four events—a 2:12 pace, 2:14 trot, 2:14 pace and free-for-all trot.

JACK JOHNSON TO SIGN WITH KAUFMAN

Jack Johnson will go to New York to-morrow night and sign up for his match with Al Kaufman, which is scheduled for September, and after attending to that formality will return to this city.

The colored heavyweight is keeping in condition, as he is matched to meet either Tony Ross or Marvin Hart in a six-round bout at Pittsburg on June 30.

Johnson also has an engagement on July 2 at Albany, to box an exhibition in that city with some unknown heavyweight.

EBBETS HAS $ $ TO SPEND FOR PLAYERS

CHICAGO, June 19.—President Ebbets of the Brooklyn team says that he has $20,000 to spend for ball players if he can get men that will strengthen his ball club. He says that he isn't looking for stars or world beaters, but if anybody can show him a few good ball players he will gladly give up any sum within reason to land them.

Mr. Ebbets isn't sitting down and waiting for these needed ball players to come and show themselves, either. He is studying the minor league dope and doing all the scouting that he can. Yesterday, an open day in the schedule, he spent in Milwaukee, where the brew town team was playing Indianapolis. He wanted to look over both teams and see if he could find a man or two who would be a help.

DRY GOODS LEAGUE OPENS SEASON TO-DAY

The first game of the Boston Dry Goods Baseball League will be played to-day between teams representing the Filene and L. P. Hollander stores. The contest will be staged at the Medford High School Field, and it is thought that a large bunch of bugs from the stores in the league will be on hand to watch proceedings.

The twirling duties for the Filene team will fall upon either Howley or Reagan, with Lucey behind the bat. O'Neil will do the stunts on the rubber for the Hollander Company, with McLove doing the backstopping.

Boxing News in Brief Form

Philadelphians will soon have a fight colony in San Francisco. Johnny Loftus is there with Leach Cross, and Billy McCarney and Young Kno are on their way. Others would go, but it takes too long to walk.

* * *

Professor Jimmy Kelly, the former manager of Mysterious Billy Smith and Eddie Connolly, is dying in a Chicago hospital, and the attending doctors say the case is hopeless. Kelly has some money in his possession, and the doctors are anxious to locate his family.

* * *

Stanley Ketchel and Manager Willis Britt have left for the coast. The crew will stop over in Denver for a boxing exhibition, which will be handled by Otto Floto. Ketchel said that he expected to stop Papke inside of two rounds when they meet on July 5. The champ says Papke is not game when up against a man who will trade wallops with him. He thinks he will beat Johnson just as easy.

* * *

The winner of the Hyland-Cross battle will be pitted against Freddie Welsh if the Englishman can be induced to accept the offer. That is Coffroth's plan, and then the runner-up will be matched with the Dane. It looks good for Cross to get by Hyland, but he had better fight Nelson for nothing than take a chance with the fast Briton. These clever fellows are too much for the East Sider.

* * *

Jim Coffroth offers Jim Jeffries $10,000 for a fifteen-round contest with some third-rater to take place in September. "Moving pictures of such an event would be in demand, for the public wants to get an idea of just how Jim would show under these conditions," says Coffroth. "I would select a man like Jim Flynn to be the trial horse. The public, of course, would not be deluded into thinking that Flynn had a chance, but the way Jeff would shape up would interest them a lot."

* * *

Harry Forbes, former bantamweight champion and one of the cleverest little fighters in the world, who has been in retirement for the past few years, is about to re-enter the ring. In a private try-out with Kid Wedge, known as the "fighting parson," the ex-champion demonstrated that he still retains his strength and cleverness, and with a few weeks of careful training will be in shape to meet any of the little fellows who are prominent in the featherweight class.

* * *

Peter Maher is back at his old trade again, slinging the booze. Pete carries a punch in either hand now, a milk in one and a rum in the other.

* * *

The big talk along the line is the prospects of a Langford-Ketchel match. What a pippin that would be. Knockout punches flying every second. Many think Sam would flatten Ketch with his right when the latter pulls that left back for the shift.

* * *

Bat Nelson has accepted a match with Jack Clifford at Oklahoma on June 20. Bat is on his way to the battlefield now. They box twenty rounds. Bat knocked Clifford out in five rounds at Salt Lake City just before he was beaten by Unholz and Britt.

* * *

Many fight sharps who saw what Ketchel did to O'Brien believe it is "Back to the alfalfa!" for Jeffries.

* * *

Dan McKetrick's loud-mouthed howl to the effect that Sam Langford is "all in" as a fighter serves only to make a laughing stock of its author. Langford is one of the fighting marvels of the age, and should any promoter ever be lucky enough to sign up Langford and Ketchel, it will be a match worth crossing oceans to witness.

* * *

Freddie Welsh sailed for England just at a time when his services were greatly in demand in this country. San Francisco, Los Angeles, New York, Boston and Philadelphia boxing promoters all were making overtures to the clever little foreigner.

* * *

The Al Kaufman-Jack Johnson battle would be worth swimming a few miles to see if it were only staged as a forty-five-round affair. In a twenty-round go, though, the end is easy to foresee. Both of the big fellows will be alive and kicking at the finish, with the negro a sure winner on points.

* * *

"Do you really think that Ad Wolgast has a chance against Battling Nelson?" was the question asked of Billy Papke. "It isn't a three to one bet that he can't lick me," was the answer of the Kewanee Knight. Papke has spent many hours watching Wolgast work in the Venice camp, and he has some ideas of his own concerning the prowess of the Milwaukee Mauler.

* * *

After looking over Stanley Ketchel's fighting qualities for the past few months we can now appreciate what a good fighter Joe Thomas must have been to stick thirty-two rounds with the champion. Joe drew in twenty the first time, lost in twenty, then lost in thirty-two, and in the last and fourth bout was put out in two rounds.

* * *

Willis Britt beat Billy Papke to Millet's training camp near the arena, where the two are going to box July 5. Britt wired out several days ago and when Papke's brother arrived in Frisco he was forced to take a camp out on the ocean beach. Papke trained at San Rafael for the last fight, and said the change of climate was the cause of his defeat.

VALUABLE STALLION DEAD.

W. A. Owings of Lexington, Ky., recently met with a severe loss when his trotting stallion Senator Axworthy (2), 2:28¼, succumbed to an attack of inflammation of the bowels. As a two and three year old he possessed futurity speed and gave every indication of becoming a great trotter, while his oldest colts show him to have been a very desirable stallion. Mr. Owings recently refused an offer of $2,900 for him.

NOTED HORSEMAN DEAD.

Thomas Ryan of Baltimore, Md., one of the organizers and treasurer of the Maryland Colt Show Association, is dead. Mr. Ryan was an enthusiastic horseman and was one of the original members of the Gentlemen's Driving Club and was also vice-president of the Baltimore Road Drivers' Association.

Yachting Notes

Mr. Maxwell declares that with the adoption of universal rating the death knell to big racing yachts was sounded.

READVILLE TRAINER GETS FUTURITY COLT

W. A. Clark, Jr., writes from Los Angeles that his two-year-old colt, Bon Vivant, by Bon Voyage 2:12¾, has trotted a mile in 2:21¼ at Los Angeles and that he will put this colt in the hands of Robert Proctor at Readville. This is the fastest work reported from any section of the country for any eligible to the season's futurity races.

NEW HOME FOR BOAT CLUB AT CHARLES RIVER

With the Charles River basin nearing completion, the rowing clubs are adapting themselves to the new conditions. The Union Boat Club has secured a location at the foot of Mt. Vernon street and has now under construction a new boat house there. This house will be conveniently situated for its members, who are mostly young professional and business men, many of them former well known Harvard oarsmen.

On the ground floor will be room for the boats and the lockers, and above there will be room for the boats and the lockers, and above there will be a balcony. Every effort is being made to have the house ready this month, which is the popular season on the river.

In addition to the boat house under construction, the union is about to build a club house on the site of its present house in rear of the boat house. Elaborate plans have been drawn to erect a well designed brick building to contain courts for squash and handball and a gymnasium, besides rooms for social gatherings and business meetings. It is the design of the officers of the club to make this larger house the main club for use all the year round and especially in Winter. It will undoubtedly be finished by December.

RESULTS OF BOXING BOUTS

HAMMOND, Ind., June 19.—Jimmy Clabby knocked out Dick Fitzpatrick in the eighth round of their scheduled ten round bout. The mill was a good one all the way, Clabby knocking Fitzpatrick down twice in the third round. Fitzpatrick came back strong after that and did good work until the eighth. When Fitzpatrick was knocked down in the eighth his seconds threw up the sponge before Referee Malachi Hogan could start to count.

NEW YORK, June 19.—Battling Hurley and Charley Griffin fought a stubborn, fast draw for ten rounds at the Fairmount Athletic Club. One of Griffin's gloves came off in the tenth round and the fight was stopped until it was readjusted.

* * *

PHILADELPHIA, June 19.—By making a whirlwind finish in his bout with Billy Donovan, Johnny Willetts won the victory by a good margin. The bout was the wind-up at the Nonpareil A. C. show. From the way Donovan started off it looked as if he would not leave very much of Willetts. The first two rounds Donovan did good work. The fight soon became a grueling one at close quarters and then it was that Willetts threw the hooks into Donovan.

HAROLD H. IS HAPPY.

If there is a turfman or Grand Circuiter who treats his family as well as the present owner of Harold H., 2:03¾, treats this once famous pacer, I can assure my readers of the incorrect and misleading statement that there is nothing to be deplored in Harold's usage or domicile, though in a livery, in the sunset of his years. Harold H. is happy, fat, slick and spry as the proverbial kitten, and his head very much cleaner than that of the author of the false and misleading statement.

Folly of Man In Platonic Friendships

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1908, by American-Journal-Examiner

A MARRIED man writes me that he has a lovely and good wife whose feelings he would not wound on any account But he met a woman who possessed a strange fascination for him.

So great was her influence that he could not drive her from his mind. And he finally requested his wife to call upon her and make her acquaintance.

The good little wife obeyed, but after seeing the effect the woman's presence produced upon her husband she refused to make any further advances, and begged the man to let the acquaintances drop.

This he considers stubborn and unreasonable conduct on the part of his wife; and as he assures me he is a man of honor and principle and incapable of wronging any woman, he begs I will use my influence to make his wife see how selfish and unkind she is, and how much like "jealousy" her conduct looks to such a broad-minded observer as he is.

I am always sorry for the man who is swept off his feet by an unreasonable passion, which he knows is unlawful and which he lets carry him out on the shoals of shame and dishonor.

Women Bear Public Censure Best

Men suffer even more keenly under the storm of public condemnation than women do! They care more for the opinion of the world, and they demand more for the object of their affection.

A woman can defy public opinion longer, while sustained by the love of the man she sacrificed it for, than a man can. The respect of his associates for the woman he loves is very necessary to a man's happiness.

Therefore I always feel sorry for the men whose lack of self-control and weakness in the hour of temptation led them into such situations.

But how unutterably contemptible is the man like my correspondent—the man who deliberately goes toward the pathway of self-indulgence and tries to cheat himself and all observers into a belief that he is honorable, noble and high-minded—the man who even endeavors to screen his weakness behind a good wife's unselfishness, and who poses as the best of husbands and Christian gentlemen, while he is at heart a libertine and a liar.

No Excuse for Such a Man

Yet under the mask of "platonic friendship" or "benevolence" or "large-hearted generosity," they are walking just as far in the flower-strewn paths of folly (which lead to arid deserts) as the woman who fascinates them will permit.

One can excuse the ignorant girl who is led into dangerous labyrinths of emotional experiences before she knows where she is going; but there is no excuse for the man—the married man—who pretends that he is "honorable" while encouraging a dangerous fascination.

He is simply self-indulgent and weak and cowardly. He wants the experience of folly and the reputation of wisdom. The sensations of license and the honors of virtue.

No man or woman can be blamed for feeling sudden and unaccountable magnetic attractions. Any man or woman may be blamed who encourages these attractions, when they are lawless and surrounded with moral dangers.

The Gourmet and the Gourmand — By Nell Brinkley

One of him woos with a divine fire in his eye and the words of fine poetry on his lips.

The other kind of him wraps his two arms around his bowl of assorted kisses, full to the brim, and not always choice.

A GOURMAND and a gourmet are both connoisseurs, collectors of good things to eat! But one is greedy—he wants all there is to eat in the world, he soaks in it, he wants lots of it, and he doesn't care a flip whether it's choice; he puts it away like the bride who choked with a bacon rind behind the pantry door—and that's the gourmand.

The other loves good things, too, but he poises his spoon gingerly to catch the divine just-right aroma of spice and pepper; he sips with closed eyes and bliss on his brow; he has a fine nose for quality; his collection is art, rarely scented, meagre, a gem ground and distilled, to the palate.

One's eye roams about the table and rolls dizzily at the generosity of the heaps on it; the eye of the other roams about the table and lightens and glistens at the rarity of the scent, and the daintiness of serving of the food upon it.

And poor little wobbly-legged, pink-cheeked Love runs about the same. He sure is a collector, and he comes in the two kinds. A gourmand and a gourmet.

One of him tucks his napkin leisurely under his chin with a divine fire in his eye and the words of fine poetry on his lips. He sets his bowl of distilled kisses reverently on his two dimpled knees, he hovers over it in restrained ecstasy; he dips and lifts his spoon, carries it to his lips—and drinks, with repressed delight, and only a little! A little doesn't content him, but it makes him happier.

The other kind of him strangles himself in his bib, wraps his two arms around his bowl—his bowl of assorted kisses, full to the brim, and not always choice—he puts his greedy little face down most to its rim, so he may not spill any; the curls wave gayly on top of his eager head; he lifts his spoonful recklessly; he stuffs and gorges his heart—he waves his pink toes, heaves up his bowl and dumps it over his wavering curls, and riots in the sweetness of the sugary potion that goes stickily down his love-locks.

Thus it is—this little Love!

Self-Conscious Appearance Is Beauty's Blight

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THERE is nothing so fatal to good looks as self-consciousness.

I realised this very forcibly the other day when a remarkably pretty girl got into a crowded car in which I was riding. She was radiantly pretty. She was daintily dressed, and, if it had not been for her painfully self-conscious expression, she would have been a joy to look at.

At first every one looked at her, but in a few minutes every man and woman in the car had detected the self-consciousness and ceased to admire.

It seems such a pity that beauty should be so absolutely wasted.

If you are beautiful, it is something to be grateful for, but there is no credit due to you personally. Accept your blessing humbly and try to make your soul and manner as lovely as your face.

Where Good Looks Are an Evil

If you are vain and self-conscious, your good looks are a curse to you, for they have ruined your nature and made you a bore.

It is only empty-headed men who are attracted by pretty, vain faces. The real men demand something more than prettiness; they want heart and brain.

The vain girl frequently overestimates her good looks. Half the time when people stare at her, they are thinking, "What a pity! That girl would be quite pretty were it not for the fact that she looks so vain and self-conscious. She thinks herself much better looking than she really is."

With vanity and self-consciousness, goes an inordinate love of dress.

The love of pretty things is inborn in woman, and there is no reason why she should not take a wholesome, normal interest in dress. But don't let dress absorb you.

If you are pretty there is no use pretending that you are aware of the fact; your looking glass and common sense tell the tale every day of your life. There is no harm in recognizing your beauty, the harm lies in thinking too much about it.

Sometimes my girl correspondents tell me that they are very pretty. I always wonder if they really are or if they simply think so in their vain little hearts.

But Then You Can't Always Tell

It sounds rather like blowing their own trumpets, but, of course, you never can tell; it may be that they are simply stating a fact and are free from vanity.

The most beautiful girl I know is absolutely free from vanity or self-consciousness. She cannot help but know how extremely pretty she is—men's eyes would betray the fact, even if she did not see it herself—but her manner is simple and modest in the extreme; there is not a particle of affectation about her.

Mountain Fire—Prince Von Sayn Wittgenstein, who is visiting in this country, tells this tale of the German Alps in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Alan Dale Flees From Munich Perils

By ALAN DALE

MUNICH June 12.

I MUST leave Munich soon. It is an obsession. Danger lurks for me in this beautiful Bavarian capital.

Last night I dreamed that I went to the playhouse. I neither rode nor walked; I swam there—in beer! I was battling with foaming billows of amber Munchener; I was buffeted in a swishing sea of yellow liquid. I awoke with queer ideas. It seemed to me that I could get along very well without drama (my life joy!); that opera was of no account at all; that art itself was but a foolish subterfuge; that life itself was but an excuse for beer.

All this was due to the fact that after visiting the Residenz Theatre, I dropped in for a few casual moments to the Hofbrauhaus, dragged there by a friend. I had no ulterior object in view—other than a chat, a social glass of ale (I thought of it as "ale") and my bed. The Hofbrauhaus! I rubbed my eyes and stared. I could not believe their testimony.

An Incessant Flux of Beer

Picture to yourself a colossal building, all decorated with frescoes, and looking as though it were meant for stately doings and imposing functions, given over, bricks, walls, frescoes, ceilings, floors—to beer! Think of seeing a thousand men of all ranks in life, doing not a mortal thing, but sitting at small wooden tables, drinking beer!

Imagine a flux of beer, incessant, astounding and without apparent rhyme or reason.

I had been to the show. I had sat listening to the problems and platitudes of a playwright, and had revelled in dead fiction. Here was the strange life that beer gives! Nothing that any theatre has ever staged could compare with this. The very walls of the Hofbrauhaus seemed to exude beer. Beer dripped; it oozed; it leaked; it sweated.

The hall was dark with the fumes of a thousand pipes, cigars and cigarettes, but nobody noticed these. Beer killed them, and took their place. Beer spilled all over the wooden floor made rubbers almost necessary. The feet slipped and slid over the bare boards; little puddles of beer collected in the crevices of the floor; flecks of foam dropped from toppling glasses looked like accasional snowflakes.

Great steins, carried in grimy hands, stalked by you in quaint procession. Each filled his own stein, and the cost was less than five cents for a whole litre.

And Then More Beer

Out on the court on which this vast, Moorish-looking hall opened was more beer—picturesque, insidious and insistent. Five hundred more men, standing in serried groups, holding on tightly to steins, that they placed on barrels instead of tables.

Everything seemed unnaturally natural, extraordinarily ordinary, and most uncommonly commonplace. Nobody said of the beer, "How nice it is!" "How good it is to-day!" "How thirsty I am!" or "How I needed it!" Nobody made use of such banal phrase. Nobody appeared to think it nice, or good, or recreative, or entertaining. They drank it as a rite; they took it as a daily observance. Comments were unnecessary; words of appreciation were useless.

The Hofbrauhaus! Its roar soon made me forget the pretty show through which I had sat. I could have stayed for hours and overheard the curious beer-drinkers at the wooden tables, all drinking for dear life, as though there was nothing else worth doing. Clothes mattered little. What a man wore was of no account. Through the haze, mere detail was invisible. Through the beery clouds one could not distinguish swallow-tails from overalls. This Munich beer seems to be a great leveller.

It Is in the Air

I could not tear myself away. I was fascinated; I was lured from myself. I have done theatres in Munich, and Pinakotheks, and Glyptotheks, and all the rest of the prescribed routine, but I had never before seen Beer arise, like a mighty giant, and blot out the rest of life.

A glass of beer! Have a glass of beer! Imagine such a thing in Munich. Have a bath of beer, perhaps—a glass, never! No. Beer in Munich is a ceremony, a rite, an observance, an institution. One does not "have a glass of beer"; one inhales it; it is assimilated; it gets into the system; it encrusts itself like barnacles on one's very being.

Yes, I must get me gone from Munich. I am obsessed.

THE MYSTERY OF THE YELLOW ROOM

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

All Paris was wildly excited over the great mystery of the tragedy of "The Yellow Room," in which an attempt was made to assassinate the beautiful and gifted Mlle. Stangerson.

The facts of the mystery were these.

At the Chateau du Glandier, on the border of the forest of Sainte-Genevieve, above Epinay-sur-Orge, lived Professor Stangerson and his daughter. She and her father were doing there the first scientific work in radiography.

Their laboratory was in a pavilion about 1,000 feet from the chateau. Adjoining the laboratory was the "Yellow Room," where Mlle. Stangerson slept. There was no access to the room except the door opening from the laboratory and one window.

In an attic directly over the "Yellow Room" lived an old servant called Daddy Jacques. Monsieur Stangerson slept in the chateau, so that the pavilion was occupied at night only by Mlle. Stangerson and Daddy Jacques.

On the night of the tragedy Mlle. Stangerson worked with her father till midnight and then retired to the "Yellow Room." Her father and Daddy Jacques heard her lock the door of the "Yellow Room" and bolt it from the inside. At 12:30 o'clock, while Jacques and Monsieur Stangerson were in the laboratory, there were sounds of a terrific struggle in the "Yellow Room" and Mlle. Stangerson was heard crying, "Murder! Help!"

Immediately afterward revolver shots rang out, and the sounds of the struggle continued for some time; then all was silence.

Mlle. Stangerson lay on the floor in her nightgown. There were marks on her throat, as if it had been clutched and almost torn with finger nails; and there was a deep wound on the right temple. A revolver that belonged to Daddy Jacques, and which he kept in his attic sleeping room, lay on the floor. There was no assailant there.

The Epoque, a Paris newspaper, sent Joseph Rouletabille, a reporter, to ferret out the mystery. Rouletabille's chief object in going to the Chateau du Glandier was to see Monsieur Robert Darzac, a professor of physics, forty years old, the affianced of Mlle. Stangerson, who had gone to her side at once on learning of the tragedy.

Arriving at Glandier, Rouletabille and Sinclair found Frederick Larsan, a great Paris dectective, at work on the case.

Robert Darzac drove down and out through the gate, in haste to catch a train, but Rouletabille stopped his horse and pronounced these mysterious words: "The presbytery has lost nothing of its charm nor the garden its brightness."

Thereupon Darzac showed great agitation and permitted Rouletabille and Sinclair to enter the grounds of the Chateau, himself returning with them.

Piloted by Darzac, Rouletabille began a careful scrutiny of every inch of the pavilion, and is at work in the "Yellow Room."

CHAPTER IX.

Reporter and Detective.

THE three of us went back toward the pavilion. At some distance from the building the reporter made us stop, and, pointing to a small clump of trees to the right of us, said:

"That's where the murderer came from to get into the pavilion."

As there were other patches of trees of the same sort between the great oaks, I asked why the murderer had chosen that one, rather than any of the others. Rouletabille answered me by pointing to the path which ran quite close to the thicket to the door of the pavilion.

"That path is, as you see, topped with gravel," he said. "The man must have passed along it going to the pavilion, since no trace of his steps have been found on the soft ground. The man didn't have wings; he walked; but he walked on the gravel, which left no impression of his tread.

"The gravel has, in fact, been trodden by many other feet, since the path is the most direct way between the pavilion and the chateau As to the thicket, made of the sort of shrubs that don't flourish in the rough season—laurels and fuschsias—it offered the murderer a sufficient hiding place until it was time to make his way to the pavilion.

"It was while hiding in that clump of trees that he saw Monsier and Mlle. Stangerson, and then Daddy Jacques, leave the pavilion. Gravel had been sperad nearly, very nearly, up to the windows of the pavilion.

A Murderer From the Clouds.

"The foot prints of a man, parallel with the wall—marks which we will examine presently, and which I have already seen—prove that he only needed to make one stride to find himself in front of the vestibule window, left open by Daddy Jacques. The man drew himself up by his hands and entered the vestibule."

"After all, it is very possible," I said.

"After all what? After all what?" cried Rouletabille.

I begged of him not to be angry, but he was too much irritated to listen to me, and declared, ironically, that he admired the prudent doubt with which certain people approached the most simple problems, risking nothing by saying "that is so," or "that is not so."

Their intelligence would have produced about the same result if nature had forgotten to furnish their brain-pan with a little gray matter. As I appeared vexed, my young friend took me by the arm and admitted that he had not meant that for me; he thought more of me than that.

"If I did not reason as I do in regard to this gravel," he went on, "I should have to assume a balloon!—My dear fellow, the science of the aerostation of dirigible balloons is not yet developed enough for me to consider it and suppose that a murderer would drop from the clouds! So don't say a thing is possible, when it could not be otherwise. We know now how the man entered by the window, and we also know the moment at which he entered—during the 5 o'clock walk of the professor and his daughter.

The fact of the presence of the chambermaid—who had come to clean up the Yellow Room—in the laboratory, when Monsieur Stangerson and his daughter returned from their walk, at half-past one, permits us to affirm that at half-past one the murderer was not in the chamber under the bed, unless he was in collusion with the chambermaid. What do you say, Monsieur Darzac?"

Monsieur Darzac shook his head and said he was sure of the chambermaid's fidelity, and that she was a thoroughly honest and devoted servant.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SHOULD NOT ASK

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

For the past two years I have been attentive to a young lady one year my junior, I being twenty years old.

I am very much infatuated with her and am positive that my love is reciprocated.

Her parents think well of me, but they are not aware of my financial condition, as I am not employed at present and have no prospects whatsoever for anything in the near future. Would it be right for me to ask the young lady to become engaged to me?

DESPONDENT.

I DO not think you should ask her to become engaged until you have brighter prospects than at present. I am sure her parents would refuse their consent. Get some employment and then propose.

DO AS PARENTS ADVISE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have known a young man about three years, but have never paid him any attention until the last year. This young man left town not long ago on some business, and ever since we have been corresponding with each other. In his last letter he asked me to spend my vacation in his locality.

Now, Miss Fairfax, what I want to know is, whether you think there is any harm in my accepting his invitation, as my parents do not approve of my doing so? He comes from a fine family and can be trusted.

F. W.

I THINK you had better do as your parents advise. It would look rather strange for you to go and spend your vacation where he is. If he wants to see you he can come and spend his vacation near you, where your parents will be on hand to look after you.

EIGHT BRIDES IN ONE PULLMAN CAR

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., June 19.—Eight bridal couples in one Pullman car is probably a new world's record. When the Colorado Midland made up a westbound train the bridegrooms and brides attracted much attention as they waited for the car. Mr. and Mrs. J. Fleming Van Rensselaer of New York were conspicuous among the number. Mr. and Mrs. F. Jacobs of Buffalo, N. Y., were no less prominent. Others in the party were: Mr. and Mrs. E. E. McKay of Oklahoma, bound for Glenwood; Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Thomas of St. Louis, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Jackson of New Orleans, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Wallace of Aledo, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Taylor of Galesburg, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Howard James of Atlanta, Ga.

SEE LEXINGTON PARK AS AMERICAN GUEST

Are you going out in the jungles of Lexington Park this coming week where the bears and deer, moose, monkeys, Asiatic Sacred Cows and South American Pumas abound, and where they give you seventy-five acres of free fun after you purchase admission at the gate? This is a park where they charge you only if you eat, if you dance or if you go to the theatre in the evening. All else is free after admission at the gate is gained. On two days next week the SUNDAY AMERICAN will furnish you free admission at the gate. How? Why, the SUNDAY AMERICAN publishes a Lexington Park free ticket of admission. If you clip it and use it on Tuesday or Friday it is as good as though stamped by Uncle Sam.

ADMIRAL OUT AFTER 47 YEARS OF SERVICE

Rear Admiral Joseph N. Hemphill, U. S. N., has gone on the retired list after a career of almost forty-seven years in the service. His retirement sends Captain Albert G. Berry up to the flag rank. Commander William S. Hogg becomes a captain. Admiral Hemphill is a native of Ohio, and was appointed to the Naval Academy in September, 1862. In the Spanish War he commanded the auxiliary cruiser Buffalo. Next he was assigned to the board of inspection and survey. While captain of the New York Navy Yard he was made rear-admiral. Until last Fall he was in command of the Asiatic fleet.

Good Things to Eat.

This is fruit time, and the dealers are arranging their wares in such a way that one is tempted to buy and perhaps ignore the more substantial viands.

Peaches may be had for 40 cents a dozen; big, red Marshall strawberries, which have just come, are 50 cents a basket, and smaller berries bring 25 cents.

Watermelons are from 50 to 60 cents each, pineapples from 15 to 25 cents each, blackberries are 20 cents a box, raspberries 15 cents a box, blueberries 25 cents a box and grapes $1 a basket.

Oranges from California run from 35 cents to 60 cents a dozen and grape fruit $1.25 to $3 a dozen; lemons are 20 cents a dozen.

But man cannot live by fruit alone, unless specially trained therefor, so the housewife looks at the meats and wonders if prices will ever go lower.

In the beef line one must pay 28 to 30 cents a pound for sirloin steak and 35 cents for rump, while rib roasts are 22 cents a pound.

Hindquarters of lamb are 20 and 22 cents a pound and short chops are up to 35 and 38 cents a pound. Mutton is 14 cents a pound and chops are 28 cents a pound.

The feathered bipeds are scarce and when denuded of their plumage bring, for native chickens, 45 to 50 cents a pound; others are 25 to 28 cents a pound.

Turkeys are 28 to 30 cents a pound, geese 20 to 25 cents a pound, ducks 25 cents a pound, squabs $3 to $4 a dozen, pigeons $2 to $2.50 a dozen.

Pork stuffs are still dear. Ham is 15 to 16½ cents a pound, bacon 17 to 22 cents a pound and fresh pork is 17 cents a pound.

Vegetables are plentiful and in good variety, and the prices are about the same as last week. Peas are a little higher, bringing 75 cents to $1 a peck. New potatoes are 75 cents a peck, and the old ones are 40 cents.

Spinach is 20 cents a peck, cucumbers 10 cents each and tomatoes 20 cents a pound. Sweet potatoes are eight cents a pound and string beans 15 cents a quart.

Almost every sort of fish may be found in the stalls. For cod, haddock and flounders one must pay seven cents a pound, for halibut 15 to 20 cents a pound and the latter price for striped bass.

Smelts of good size are 30 cents a dozen, salmon is 30 cents a pound, fresh mackerel are plenty and range from 20 to 25 cents each, black bass is 15 cents a pound, red snapper is 10 cents a pound and shad 12 to 18 cents.

INDISMANTLED HOME, MORSES MARK WEDDING

NEW YORK, June 19.—Charles W. Morse and his wife celebrated the eighth anniversary of their wedding by a dinner party last night in their home, No. 728 Fifth avenue. This home was a palace when Morse left it to enter the Tombs eight months ago. During his incarceration, however, it was sold over his wife's head, after she had practically stripped it of most of its furnishings to pay the fees of his lawyers in the fight for his liberty.

The former banker figured prominently in Wall street again yesterday. He rode down on the Elevated to the scenes of his former financial triumphs.

He called on his lawyers and visited other men with whom he had done business, but he did not select an office. He will do that later.

Among the places at which Morse called yesterday was the office of Primrose & Braun, the brokers, who were among the important witnesses at his trial. Braun formerly was Morse's private secretary.

Heinze looked worried. He has lost much of the dapper appearance for which he was noted before the Grand Jury acquired what he seems to regard as the chronic habit of indicting him.

Mountain Fire—Prince Von Sayn Wittgenstein, who is visiting in this country, tells this tale of the German Alps in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

An Appeal to the Senate

PASS THE TELEGRAPH AMENDMENT THAT THE PEOPLE DEMAND

The American APPEALS TO THE SENATE TO PASS THE HOUSE AMENDMENT TO THE TELEGRAPH BILL THAT THE PEOPLE DEMAND SHALL BE PASSED, THAT THE BUSINESS INTERESTS DEMAND AND THAT GOVERNOR DRAPER DEMANDS.

The House amendment is clean cut, allows no loophole of escape, does not refer the matter to a commission, and is DRAWN FOR THE PURPOSE OF MAKING THE TELEGRAPH COMPANIES OBEY THE LAW, without saddling an onerous tax upon the people, but does make the companies perform their public duties as they should be performed.

Senator Potter's amendment is drawn to favor the telegraph companies, and in the end will COMPEL THE PUBLIC to annually pay a vast sum that should not be levied upon it.

Nobody is in favor of the Potter amendment except the telegraph companies and the telegraph Senators.

Failure by the Senate to pass the House amendment can be construed in only one way. THE GRAVEST SUSPICION WILL ATTACH TO THE WHOLE PROCEEDINGS.

Senators will please remember that they are the SERVANTS OF THE PEOPLE, and not of the telegraph companies.

And, further, it will be well to remember that there is always a DAY OF RECKONING, a time when a thorough investigation may place some ugly facts before the people, for the session about to close has not been wholly conducted for the benefit of the public.

The American APPEALS TO THE SENATE TO DO ITS DUTY.

PASS THE HOUSE AMENDMENT AND DO IT AT ONCE.

STAND BY THE PEOPLE AND BY GOVERNOR DRAPER.

The American hopes and believes that Senator Elmer C. Potter of Worcester, author of the obnoxious amendment, will at once see the necessity for changing his position. This newspaper urges him to withdraw his amendment. He has a fine opportunity to-day to make a great record for himself, a splendid chance to do something for the public that should not be lost.

Withdraw your amendment, Senator Potter, and let the Senate pass the House amendment! YOU CANNOT AFFORD TO END YOUR POLITICAL CAREER TO-DAY!

That Government Tax on Corporation Incomes

A Feeble Income Tax Compromise. The Corporations Roar, Howl, Peep and Mutter

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

There was talk about an Income Tax coming out of the Senate and White House. There was also talk once, you remember, about a very fine, large, elephantine baby coming out of a mountain. When the mountain had finished its task, a very small, young mouse was the result.

The Senate and Mr. Taft, after due consultation, also offers us, in place of a large Income Tax, a small, young mouse which they call a tax on corporations.

The corporation is to pay to the government two per cent. of its net profits. That would seem pretty mild.

Mind you, this does not mean two per cent. as you may understand it. For instance, if a trust paid a profit of, say, ten per cent., the government would not get one-fifth of that; it would get ONE-FIFTIETH.

That is to say, for every hundred dollars that the corporation might distribute to stockholders, the government, by way of an Income Tax, would get TWO DOLLARS.

First, you would have to overcome all the inevitable juggling of figures by the trust—our big men are pretty famous for their ability to swear off taxes, as you know. And after you got the money, it wouldn't be very much.

But already the trusts and the newspapers that they own are roaring like one of Roosevelt's lions. These trusts say that the end of the world is coming.

One trust newspaper, shedding inky tears, lies on its stomach in front of the Senators and says: "We are asking the conservative Senators if they really understand the meaning and consequences," etc., etc., of this harmless little tax?

When a real Income Tax is talked about, Mr. Taft says "By and by" and suggests a little compromise in the way of a little corporation Income Tax. And the trusts roar, and there probably won't be any tax at all.

The small people, as usual, will continue to pay the bills for running the government, and also the bills for running the trusts and the yachts of the trust owners, and all the other bills.

DR. CHAS. H. PARKHURST

EUROPEAN politics is in a way more interesting than American, as being more complicated, and as involving greater unstability of equilibrium; so that any event, however seemingly insignificant in its first aspect, and occurring in whatever part of the Continent, may be regarded as fraught with the most serious possible consequences.

The topic of engrossing interest at the present moment is the rivalry, material and military, existing between England and Germany.

Viewed from a distance the distraught condition of the English mind might be considered as being rather in the nature of a panic, but the nearer one comes to London the more evident it becomes that the feeling is one of serious and intelligent alarm, and that while some are treating the whole war-scare as a mere bogey, such as rather meets the wants of English hypersensitiveness, yet the prevailing sentiment is one of solid anxiety, mounting up almost to consternation.

Actual Anxiety Concerning Germany

So conservative a thinker as Frederic Harrison, who has always heretofore been pronounced in his anti-militaristic views, has now publicly expressed himself as deeply disturbed by the steadily growing military ambition of Germany, and by the rapidity with which she is equipping herself for such enterprises of expansion or aggression as she may be secretly contemplating.

While there is in sight no ground for the rupture of existing amicable relations, yet it is understood that where there exists the fighting propensity some means for the satisfaction of that propensity can surely be discovered, or, if not discovered, created.

Bismarck, it is related, helped to produce the conditions that would justify, in the eyes of the world, Prussia's assault upon France.

For forty years the military consciousness stimulated among the Germans by the all-too-complete victory consummated at Sedan, has gone on developing, till it is safe to suppose that Emperor William cherishes no less a purpose to-day than that of dictating the diplomatic policies of each of the several nations of the Continent.

It is not going a great way to imagine that Austria's recent plunge into Balkan territory was in pursuance of German suggestion, and with a view to the establishing of such relations between Germany and the German component of the dual empire as should enable the Germany Emperor to add to his own army sufficient auxiliaries to give him the handling of a million trained soldiers.

Germany's Growing Navy an Added Source of Worry

To all of this, which is in itself already sufficiently disquieting, is to be added the still more disturbing fact of the tremendous rapidity with which Germany is building up its naval armament, an equipment of such a character as indicates that it is not intended for service near home, but to be used as the sharp end of a spear, whose main shaft is supplied by its already existing land force.

With a possible army of a million soldiers brought to the highest point of military discipline, supplemented by a navy with which, in the course of a few years, none other will be comparable, it is not strange that not only in England, but throughout all Europe, the present is a season of extreme thoughtfulness.

It is not to be supposed that Germany will, without the intervention of events that cannot now be definitely forecast, make an overt attack upon England.

But there is something that she wants, there is a territory she desires to acquire, territory that perhaps is now governmentally independent and that it would be for the interest of England, at any rate, to remain independent.

Suppose such a power to be Holland. Germany wants Holland. The Rhine, which enters the sea through Holland, is a most important centre of distribution for commodities introduced from abroad through Rotterdam as a port of entry.

As things now are it costs Germany an immense amount of money annually because such commodities have to be brought to the Rhine over a foreign frontier. It is an expense to her and a humiliation.

The royal house of Holland has its German connections.

May Hesitate if Germany Goes for Holland

It is true that Holland has a Queen and a Princess, but even so there are contingencies. There are cleavage lines into which Germany will not be slow to introduce the thin edge of a wedge.

England would want to save Holland, but she would hesitate long before taking a step that might prove the ruination of her commerce, the destruction of her marine and the demolition of London.

No; Germany is not building Dreadnoughts in order to destroy England, but in order to be able to, in case England should throw herself across the path of German ambition.

And Not Only That, but—

RIGHT OVER THERE, DEAR.
NO, I GUESS OVER HERE—
AND NOT ONLY THAT, BUT-I THINK YOU'D BETTER PUT IT BACK WHERE IT WAS AT FIRST, DEAR.
